Capt. Pliny Norcross

ing company shortly after eight this morning, brings to end the suspense that his family and friends have sustained since early Monday morning when it was discovered he had not been at the Myers Hotel where he was stopping, since Sunday noon.

Captain Norcross arrived in Janesville on Friday evening last from Troy, Pennsylvania, where he is spending the summer. He expected to be in Janesville for several days and delighted his friends by his robust appearance and apparent splendid health. His son, John V. Norcross and family, of Chicago, were guests in the city at the residence of Mrs. Norcross' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Ruger Sr., and Captain Norcross took dinner with them there on Sunday.

He left, stating he was going to the hotel to take a nap and later would go to tea with them at a friend's home. Evidently he did not go to the hotel but walked over toward the old mill property he owned some years ago to investigate any changes that might have been made. He was seen going in that direction shortly before the cry went up that a man had fallen in the race-way, but no one connected the missing man with Captain Norcross until late Monday afternoon.

It is evident that in walking along the board sidewalk that borders the race, his hat blew off and in reaching for it he lost his balance and fell into the water, his head striking a sunken piece of timber and entangling the body so that he did not rise again to the surface. The only trace that anyone had drowned was a floating panama hat which late Monday afternoon was partially identified as Captain Norcross' property.

A quiet search was made all day Monday by relatives who had become worried over his absence from the hotel but it was thought he might have gone away with friends and would return. It was not until the hat was partially identified did the Sunday drowning become connected with Captain Norcross' disappearance.

As soon as it was known Monday afternoon that Captain Norcross was missing the police took up the dragging of the mill-race with renewed determination. From four o'clock until a late hour men equipped with grapple hooks and pike poles went over every inch of the race and removed a large part of the drift wood at the grates. One boat with three men searched under the Blodgett buildings where it was thought the victim of the accident might have fallen between the platform and building. For three hours they dragged under here while the police officer searched by the side of the grates.

This morning when it was ascertained that Norcross was still missing an added force of men were put to work on the mill-race north of the power grates. In one boat Helgeson and Gehrki used grapple hooks further up the race near the east bank, about fifty feet from the grates. Gehrki hooked an object down in the twelve foot of water and the points loosened. On dragging again he managed to secure a firm hold on the body with the hook, and pulled it to the surface. The body was taken to shore and Dr. Charles Sutherland was called who ordered the remains removed from the scene. At the Ryan's undertaking rooms the body was positively identified as Captain Norcross by friends of the deceased.

When the remains were taken from the water the glasses worn by the deceased were still firmly fixed upon his nose. His watch had stopped at twelve and a half minutes past two, showing approximately the exact time he fell into the water.

During the morning the body was removed to the Kimball undertaking rooms and arrangements were made for the funeral services as soon as Mrs. Norcross, who was in Troy, Pennsylvania, was heard from.

As planned at present, the services will be held at ten-thirty at the Congregational church, Thursday morning. The pall-bearers will be selected from among his old comrades of the William H. Sargent Post. The church services will be read by Rev. Charles E. Bwing, but the services at the grave will be under the G. A. R. auspices.

It is expected that members of the legislature, members of the Grand Army, including present department officers and numerous friends from all parts of the state, will be present for the services. The interment will be at Oak Hill.

Honorable Pliny Norcross was one of Janesville's most influential citizens for many years. A lawyer by profession, he served four years as district attorney of Rock county from 1871 to 1875 and 1876. He sat in the mayor's chair for two terms, 1877 to 1879 and has four times represented the Janesville District in the state legislature: first in 1867 and again in 1885, and in 1905 to 1907. His intellectual capability and his moral worth have commanded respect and his kindly impulses, generous nature and genial disposition and charitable instincts made him universally popular.

Mr. Norcross was born in the town of Templeton, Worcester county, Mass., November 16, 1838. His father, Franklin Norcross, a farmer and lumberman in his native state, and who removed from Massachusetts to Wisconsin in 1832, settling in La Grange, Walworth county, married Lydia Powers. To this union there were born three sons and two daughters.

His father died in 1875, in his sixty-third year, his wife surviving him until August, 1892, when she died at Denver, Colo., at the age of seventy-seven. Daniel Norcross, the father of Franklin and Pliny, was a descendant from early Colonial stock, and his wife, the grandmother of Pliny, was a descendant of an old Puritan family.

Pliny Norcross came to Walworth county with his parents in 1852. He attended Milton Academy for two years and was at the state university for a short time. On April 18, 1861, he enlisted in company K, 1st Wisconsin Infantry, under Capt. Lucius Fairchild, being the first student to enlist in the war for the Union. Later he enlisted in Co. K of the 13th and for three years he was captain of this company. Two of his brothers served in his company and one died, while in service under him.

Mr. Norcross was married January 4th, 1866, to Phoebe A. Poole, only daughter of John H. and Elizabeth Poole. The children of this marriage were Frederick P., John Vanderpoole, Elizabeth Leavitt, and Edward Powers.

In the spring of 1865, Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Norcross settled in the city of Janesville. Mr. Norcross was law partner of the late Judge John R. Bennett from 1866 to 1873, then a year with Honorable A. Jackson. He retired from 1876 to 1883 was in partnership with Honorable B. F. Dunwiddie, late judge of the twelfth circuit. Upon the death of the late Mr. Norcross and Dunwiddie, Mr. Norcross gave the practice of law and went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and in company with two partners, Messrs. Murray and Bullock, organized the International Typographic company, of which he was president. After the factory was erected, he sold his interest and returned to Janesville and in 1884 he erected the Norcross block on River street, and in the summer of 1884 moved the firm's office from its location on Milwaukee street to its present location on Rock street, the corner of Dodge street, and leased it to the firm of Doty and McKee; later, he bought out McKee and remained as partner in the firm until 1900, when he sold his interest in the milling business to Mr. Doty. In the same year, 1884, he erected the Phoebe block on Milwaukee street, and in 1885 he erected a permanent electric lighting plant in the city of Janesville, being a part of the site formerly occupied by the Phoebe mill, using the same water wheels and dam, by means of which electric current that had been used for turning the Buhr mill.

In 1892, Mr. Norcross purchased the Fulton milling property on the Catfish river, tore down the old mill and put in its place an electric light plant from which he furnished current for Edgerton and for Janesville street lamps. This plant, which was about thirty-three miles in length and was a part of the first long distance plant in Wisconsin. In 1891 and 1892 he purchased the old abandoned flouring mills at Indian Ford, and a few years thereafter united the power of both mills into an electric light plant and grist mill on the site of the McKee mill, on the west side of the river. In 1895 he sold the Janesville electric plant and mill, together with the Fulton electric plant, to the Janesville Electric company. From 1889 to 1897 he was in partnership with Alexander Richardson, in the manufacture of ladies' fine shoes, in the Norcross block.

Mrs. Phoebe Poole Norcross passed to the world beyond in 1900 and later Mr. Norcross married for a second time Mrs. Frances Spaulding Redding, of Troy, Pennsylvania, who, with his three sons, Edward, John, and Frederick, and Mrs. Bessie Mason, all of Chicago, and several grandchildren are left to mourn his loss.

Captain Norcross was a past department commander of the Wisconsin branch of the Grand Army of the Republic, being elected to that office in June of 1904. He also served as a member of the State Board of University Regents, resigning from that office several years ago when he purchased a winter home at Orlando, Florida, and spent part of the year there.

Captain Norcross did not actually sever his connection with Janesville until a few years ago, but he made visits here twice a year, spending his winters in the south and his summers either in Chicago or at Troy, Pennsylvania, where Mrs. Norcross lived before her marriage. His visit here at this time was in connection with some business interests he still controls. He was invited to go to Madison today, the guest of the city of which he was so long an honored member, and it was search for him to deliver the invitation that brought about the discovery he was mysteriously absent.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, July 13.—The treasury department hereafter will construct postoffices and other federal buildings in accordance with the needs and importance of the places where they are located instead of spending all that congress appropriates. It long has been a criticism that unimportant places often get expensive federal buildings out of proportion to their needs. In some instances expensive postoffices have been built in towns where the postal receipts were not sufficient to sustain them.

Possibility of a strike of more than 50,000 women members of the Ladies' Garment Workers' association also is threatened. A delegation from the organization had an appointment to confer late today with the mayor's office of conciliation to consider the women's demands for sanitary work shops and restoration of the old wage scale.

Leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America asserted today that unless an adjustment of the pant makers' strike was reached, the 10,000 already out would be joined by the forty-eight makers of coats, suit makers, vest makers, cutters and children's garment workers.

HAS ACCEPTED OFFER

Proposition Made by Secretary Daniels Meets With Approval of Inventor—Honor His Only Pay.

West Orange, N. J., July 13.—Thomas A. Edison has accepted an invitation from Secretary Daniels to head an advisory board of civilian inventors for a bureau of invention and development to be created in the navy department. His acceptance will go forward at once to Washington, where the new plans await word from the man "who can turn dreams into realities."

The plan is to have several men prominent in special lines of inventive research associated in the work. Among the great problems to be laid before the investigators, the secretary mentioned submarine warfare, adding that he felt sure that with Mr. Edison's wonderful brain to help them the officers of the navy would be able to meet this new danger with new devices that will assure peace to our country by their effectiveness.

Daniels' letter to Edison.
"One of the imperative needs of the navy," Mr. Daniels said in his letter, "is machinery and machinery facilities for utilizing the natural inventive genius of Americans to meet the new conditions of warfare as shown abroad, and it is my intention, if a practical way can be worked out, to think it can be, to establish at the earliest moment a department of invention and development to which all ideas and suggestions, either from the service or from civilian inventors, can be referred for determination as to whether they contain practical suggestions for us to take up and perfect."

"Of course, receive many suggestions, but our only way of handling them at present is to leave them to various bureaus already overcrowded with routine work, and it is not always possible to give the necessary attention to propositions that are not so definitely worked out as to make them immediately available for the service."

"Idea which contain the germ of improvement cannot always be given the attention they deserve, as there is at present no specially equipped department to which to send them for the careful study required."

"What Hinders Present Efforts."
"I have no doubt," Mr. Daniels said, "that those who are in a position to note where improvements are needed and to devise ways in which these improvements can be made. They have, however, neither the time nor the special training, nor in many cases the natural inventive turn of mind needed to put these ideas into definite shape."

"Where there is a place where they could be sent to be worked out and perfected, I am sure we would get a much more rapid improvement from this source alone."

"The navy department is unprovided with the best facilities for work of this experimental nature, and investigation with the exception of a few test stations at Annapolis, which is, as yet, a small affair."

"I am sure, as I have said, there is no particular lack of a particular body of men, relieved of other work, charged solely with the duty of either perfecting new things themselves, or perfecting those which are submitted to the department by our naturally inventive people."

"Tells Plan of Department."
"I intend a general plan of organizing such a department, which is still very hazy as to details, but which in a general way, meets, so far as the navy is concerned, with your ideas of improvement for the government in general."

"Asks Him to be an Adviser."
"What I want to ask is if you would be willing to serve as an adviser to the navy, to act as an adviser to the board, to take such things as seem to you to be of value but which we are not at present equipped to investigate, and to use your own magnificent facilities in such investigation, if you feel it worth while."

"No wonder, unfortunately, have nothing to do with the navy, and we think, of the navy, large, together with the feeling of service to your country that you will be able to offer by way of recognition, and to your own country, your patriotism and your unselfish loyalty to your country's interests that I feel justified in making this request."

"We are confronted with a new and terrible engine of warfare in the submarine, to consider only one of the big things which I have in mind, and I feel sure that with the practical knowledge of the officers of the navy, with a department composed of the keenest and most inventive minds that we can gather together, and with your own wonderful brain to aid us, the United States will be able in the past to meet this new danger with new devices that will assure peace to our country by their effectiveness."

"If you feel that you would be willing to do this, I would like, a little later, when my plans are somewhat matured, to consult with you as to the details of the organization, and proposed so that I can make it as effective as possible for the purpose intended."

"Would Enlist Other Experts."
"With you it might be well to associate a few men prominent in special lines of inventive research, and I would also like to consult with you as to who these men should be. It is, of course, your aid that I rely upon most and if you are not able, for any reason, to do this, I will frankly hesitate to undertake the matter at all."

"Should you feel like accepting the task, however, I know the relief which the country would feel in these trying times at the announcement that you are aiding us in this all important matter."

Silence of German Field Marshal on

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, July 13.—Official reports say:

"An aerial squadron of thirty-five aviators ascended this morning in spite of a wind blowing forty miles an hour and bombarded the railroad station strategically established by the Germans at Vigneulle les Hatichat. This station served the region of the Callone trenches and that of the forest at Apremont. Very important stores of every kind and particularly ammunition were concentrated there. Our aviators dropped upon these objectives 171 bombs of 30 kilograms each. The bombardment started several fires. All our machines returned, although, they had been violently cannonaded."

Cathedral Shelled.
"On July 5 at 4:30 p. m. the enemy recommenced its bombardment of the city, concentrating its fire on the environs of the cathedral, more especially upon St. Vast, the ancient bishop's place, which has been transformed into a museum. Incendiary shells set the building on fire and the use of these shells from three or four-inch guns prevented our organizing to combat the fire, which completely destroyed the palace. During the night there was an intermittent bombardment."

"On July 6 about 7 a. m. shells fell on the cathedral, the roof of which took fire, and despite the efforts of our troops was completely consumed, as were the cathedral organs."

The departmental archives which had been deposited in the palace of St. Vast had been placed in the cellar of the palace before the bombardment and were saved. The sacred ornaments and part of the furnishings in the cathedral were removed.

Von Mackensen Silent.
London, July 13.—There are contradictory reports regarding the extent of the Austro-Hungarian reverse at Presnik in Southern Russian Poland, continuing the day claiming that the Austro-Hungarians are contemplating a general retreat, but the mystery of the situation is the persistent silence maintained by Field Marshal von Mackensen, who is currently making no effort to resume the German advance on Warsaw.

Petrograd reasons this inaction of the German commander as due to the fear of Field Marshal von Mackensen that his left flank would be exposed, while the Austrians were on the defensive, but some fear is expressed by London observers that a brilliant German military commander is planning an unexpected coup.

German Troops Arrive.
The German attack on Souchez, where the French advances had threatened the town, which was indicated the arrival of the front of the long expected Teutonic reinforcements, but evidence still is lacking of any concerted effort on either side along the battle front in France and Belgium.

Germany and Austria Hungary, according to dispatches from the Balkan states, are giving every diplomatic resource to induce Roumania to join military forces with the central powers, or at least to preserve an attitude of permanent friendly neutrality. It is reported that the Austro-Hungarian minister at Bucharest has offered the Roumanian government liberal territorial compensation for armed assistance, countering Russia's offer of Transylvania with the aid of Bessarabia. Her reward for friendly neutrality is said to be Bukovina as far as the Pruthi.

Balkan Negotiations.
From Austrian sources comes a report that Russia is giving substantial proof of the possibility of Roumanian acceptance of these Teutonic offers by building their own entanglements along her Roumanian frontier. Bulgarian and Turkey are said to have reached a deadlock in their negotiations on account of the refusal of Sofia to do more than reserve a friendly neutrality in return for territorial compensation from Constantinople.

SCORE TRIUMPH WITH SHAKESPEARE COMEDY

ARDEN DRAMA PLAYERS PLAY "TAMING OF SHREW" TO 800 LAST EVENING.

BLAND'S BAND TODAY

Today is Big Day of Chautauqua Program—Excellent Program Billed for Tonight.

The Arden Drama players, organized and coached by Elias Day, of the Lyceum Arts Conservatory of Chicago, presented to the hundreds of people last evening at the Janesville Chautauqua, William Shakespeare's masterful comedy, "The Taming of the Shrew." In excellent dramatic style, taking the large audience back to the days when modes and customs were quite different than they are now. The costumes used in the play were of the period, characteristic of those days, and the hot weather failed to bother the participants who proved to be rare exhibitors of the art of acting in the old school.

Although many of the incidents in the play taken by minor characters were left out, the general story of the taming of Katherine, or Kate the Shrew, by Petruchio, was given by the capable cast.

Pitt Parker Enjoyed. The work of Pitt Parker in his craven nature in "Singing Hinges" last evening, prior to the dramatization by the Arden Players, proved a real treat and forced hearty laughs from the audience. As they watched him work with his hands in a ready fashion, at the same time telling witty stories. His works of art, in color landscape sketching with pastels and black and white, tended to illustrate what he had to say, and his general idea, that of seeing more than you are looking at, was vividly conveyed to the audience before the final act. The play, "The Grey Home in the West," was sung, while he illustrated in colors the home.

The Arden Company and Pitt Parker entertained to about six hundred people, Monday always being a bad day, the Janesville association as well as the Janesville management are highly elated over the attendance, which today they hope will be doubled.

Secretary Parisoe said this morning that it is possible to have Senator Mason say over tonight and make a short address, and it is very likely that he will do so. This should be an added feature today, the big day.

The Junior Chautauqua continues to be an attraction for the little folks. About the usual number continue to attend, and Miss Cullison is well pleased with the attention the younger generation pay to her when she is telling them stories.

Today is Big Day. Miss Jean A. Mason and as reader and impersonator, and Harrie L. Bland's great chautauqua band furnished the entertainment today. As today was scheduled to be the biggest day of the chautauqua, considerably over a thousand people in both the afternoon and evening sessions were expected.

This afternoon at two-thirty, Bland's band furnished a forty-five minute concert, after which Miss Jean MacDonald rendered several short readings that were appreciated. Hon. William E. Mason, former senator from Illinois, was the other attraction this afternoon. He talked interestingly for almost an hour on the subject, "The American Knave."

He told of many of his personal experiences with many of the chief executives of the nation. Following this concert, Miss MacDonald will give readings for the remainder of the evening. She is witty, and says she only lives for fun. A good laugh can be enjoyed by hearing her tonight.

Program for Wednesday. Wednesday will mark next to the last day of the chautauqua, or the fifth day. The Beverlys will furnish a musical entertainment at two-thirty in the afternoon and in the evening will give a musical prelude as their part of the day's program. Harold Morton Kramer, the cowboy, newspaper reporter, editor, Spanish writer, officer, writer and orator, will appear tomorrow afternoon in a thrilling lecture. Many who heard him last year surely want to hear him again. He is a rapid but discerning lecturer with a wonderful personality and a strong voice. He will talk on "The Philosophy of Life."

Following this lecture, entertainment at seven-thirty in the evening. Reno B. Welbourn will appear in perhaps the most novel and unique entertainment of the week. His experiments are purely scientific and are done by means of wireless telegraphy. He is called "The Prophet of the Lyceum."

Commercial Club Will Have Published a Warning to Public to Avoid Making Fake Investments.

Before you subscribe for stock in any new enterprise ask the secretary of the Commercial club if the proposition has been investigated. The directors today voted to have published a warning to Rock county citizens against investing in dubious concerns. The secretary if he is not already familiar with any new proposition, will investigate for you. Much money has been lost on these stock investments and the club's investigation offers an opportunity to make sure before you agree to invest your money.

John C. Nichols and Mr. Fay of the John C. Nichols Harness company, presented a proposition for the expansion of the company. Mr. Nichols reviewed the success of the business since its beginning with a capital of $7,500 with which the first year's business amounted to $60,000, and stated that the concern with its new business addition of the "Fitzgerald" horse collar was capable of greater employment of additional men with an increased amount of capital and larger factory quarters. The industrial committee, who have the matter in charge, this week with Mr. Nichols again met to go into the matter further and arrange a plan whereby assistance may be extended the Nichols company, and the city benefited by increasing the manufacturing establishment.

NEW COUNTY PLAN FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

County to be Divided Into Districts. Outcome of Sunday School Association Meeting.

As the outcome of the meeting of the officers of the Rock County Sunday School association, held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, a new plan was adopted to further the work of the association, by dividing the county into seven districts, each to be a small association in itself. The officers of these districts are to meet and plan their campaigns during the adjournment of the main association of the county. Miss Bailey of Neenah, secretary of the State Sunday School association, was the chief speaker of the meeting and led in planning the campaign for the coming year.

Officers and superintendents were elected and the general situation of the county earnestly discussed. Rev. E. A. Finn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Beloit, was elected president. A. E. Whitford of Milton, vice president; H. O. Meyer of Evansville, treasurer; L. A. Markham of Janesville, corresponding secretary; Miss E. Bueh, chairman of Milton Junction recording society. The heads of the several departments were also elected and Mrs. Ben Carey of Janesville was elected superintendent of the elementary department. Arthur Roodhouse of Beloit, superintendent of the 'teen age boys' department; Miss Annie Hollister of Beloit, of the 'teen age girls' department. The adult department, headed by Miss Mary Barker of Janesville. D. N. Inglis of Milton is to be the superintendent of the teaching training department. Mrs. J. H. Hakebeck of Milton having charge of the home department. The temperance department will be under Mrs. B. E. Jure of Juda, and the missionary department, Mrs. J. W. Clinton of Clinton. SWIMMING LESSONS TO START THURSDAY

Playground Youths and Others Will Be Given Instruction in Rock River at That Time.

Swimming lessons for the boys and girls as well as the older people of the city will be started Thursday morning when the youth and young men will be given their initial dip in Rock river. The lessons, as in previous years, will be held at Goose Island, near the ice house. The boys will swim on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, while the girls will have the remaining three days. The tower and spring board will again be put up for use of the swimmers.

The directors of the four playgrounds will meet the children at the playgrounds at nine o'clock on the morning of the swim so they may reach the island by the thirty. An unusually large number is expected this year in spite of the postponement of the opening due to the condition of the water. The small particles of grass have practically disappeared, making the bathing excellent.

During the remainder of the week the directors at the playgrounds will hold a series of events or tests for the boys and girls in various athletic stunts. A ribbon or badge will be given to each boy and girl who meets given standard in all four events which will be held. To win a badge the entrant must pass the standard in all events or he forfeits all claim to receiving the honor ribbon. The events are, 100 yard dash, basketball for three chinning, and running high and broad jump.

Monday the Washington and Jefferson schools officially opened the indoor playground at the Washington boys annexed the victory by a 14 to 10 win. The teams were more evenly matched than the game on Wednesday afternoon the Webster and Adams schools will meet at the Jefferson grounds. The teams are great rivals from year with an unusual amount of interest the result.

It has been decided by the directors of the Jefferson and Webster school grounds to hold a game of baseball between the girls' teams next Tuesday afternoon. Both teams are practicing hard for the event.

ESCAPE DEATH IN LIGHTNING STORM

Two Plymouth Young Men Are Stunned When Team of Horses Are Instantly Killed by Stroke Saturday.

Patrick Clark, a laboring hand employed on the William Finnane farm, of this city in the town of Plymouth, and Daniel Finnane, narrowly escaped death Saturday afternoon when a bolt of lightning struck a team of horses, young men were driving, killing the horses instantly and stunning the men.

The two young men were working in the same field Saturday afternoon finishing tobacco setting, when the storm arose. A first flash of lightning warned them, and Clark attempted to unhitch his team from the tripplines, while Finnane was unfastening his team from the water wagon. Clark turned his team aside and drove a few yards away and rushed to meet Clark to aid him in unhitching the reins. Before he reached Clark the second and fatal bolt struck the team, killing the two animals, and stunning the men. Clark was thrown underneath the horses' bodies and was unable to reach the house by himself.

Paintings That Were a Gift of France for 'Yankees' Services Arrive in New York.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, July 13.—A collection of original paintings and drawings, by some of the noted artists of France, presented to the United States by the Society of French Artists and Writers, arrived here today on the steamer Rochambeau from Havre. The paintings and drawings are a token of appreciation of the work done by Americans in France since the war started.

The collection was in charge of Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge of Boston, wife of the special agent of the American embassy in Paris, who will deliver them to the state department at Washington.

Toledo, O., July 13.—A token of appreciation for what the people of the United States have done for Belgium, Charles Leon Cardon, artist and collector of Brussels, has presented to the people of this country the most celebrated painting in his collection. It is Van Dyke's sketch for his picture, "St. Martin Cutting His Mantle and Sharing It With a Poor Man." This information has just been received from Brand Whitlock, American minister to Belgium, by Marshall Tappan of Toledo. The picture will probably be placed in Toledo.

Los Angeles, July 13.—The Grand Lodge of Elks opened its session here today with the election of officers, a mere formality which installed James R. Nicholson of Boston as grand exalted ruler, succeeding Raymond Benjamin of California. W. F. Schach of Milwaukee was elected grand leading night; William Low, Saginaw, Mich. grand local night; E. R. Ingersoll, Seattle, grand lecturing knight; Thomas E. Bond, London, Conn., grand inner guard. Fred C. Robinson, Dubuque, and Charles A. White of Chicago, were re-elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

PLINY NORCROSS.

The city was shocked this morning to learn of the untimely death of Captain Pliny Norcross, and genuine sorrow was expressed on every hand.

Captain Norcross served his generation through the years of active life, enjoying in full measure the respect and confidence of the community where his lot was cast.

He was a genial man as well as an optimist, and his friends were numbered by his acquaintances. The old Norcross home was an ideal home, noted for hospitality and good cheer.

A ready talker and a good after-dinner speaker, his name was familiar as an entertainer, and his audiences were never disappointed. The spirit of enterprise prompted him to become a leader, and he was always at the front when questions of public betterment were being considered.

As a legislator he served the state intelligently, and as a token of respect, the assembly, now in session, had planned to entertain him at Madison tomorrow.

Among his closest friends were his comrades of the Grand Army, and the annual campaigns were occasion for keeping warm the friendships formed during the years of service in the field.

Captain Norcross was privileged to live to his day and generation, but the impress of his remains as a helpful influence, and his memory will be cherished by the people who knew him well.

His hopes were realized and death found him out on the border line, with work accomplished, and ready to depart. His last wish was also gratified, for he said to a friend last Saturday morning: "When the end comes I want to go quick, and without a struggle."

When he missed his footing and toppled over into the water, the end came so suddenly that he was spared the suffering of lingering illness, which he dreaded.

Death is always a shock, but never a surprise, when it comes to our friends who are living on borrowed time. General Norcross will be extended to Captain Norcross' family, and his memory will linger as a pleasant memory, for he lived to a purpose, and accomplished much.

TREASURY DEFICIT.

One of the gravest problems which confronts this administration is the tremendous deficit in the United States treasury, in round numbers $75,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, about twice the amount of the deficit for the year ending June 30, 1914. All the juggling which the treasury officials may do with the receipts and disbursements will not serve to dispel the fact that democratic conduct of the nation's finances has been attended with disaster. The Underwood tariff bill has been a hopeless failure as a revenue producer. Even the war taxes, which are a burden to many people, and which have been compensated for such loss of revenue as was due directly to the European war, have failed to maintain the revenues at a safe level. The democratic majorities in the last congress treated the treasury badly with the circumsppection of famished hogs who had broken into a ripe corn field. And this despite frequent and emphatic warnings—not from republicans but from the democratic chairman of the appropriations committee, J. J. Fitzgerald. Mr. Fitzgerald, probably the ablest financier in the democratic party, warned his colleagues of the danger of their course and he besought the president to use his power over congress to curtail the reckless extravagance, but to no avail. The president and his friends in congress sowed the wind and now they are reaping the whirlwind. It is probable that the revenues will prove insufficient to tide the government over until the regular session of congress, but some new method of raising revenue must be devised then and once more producer and consumer, business man and farmer will alike be called upon to shoulder increased and unnecessary burdens.

THE SUGAR SITUATION.

Already Rock county farmers have felt the effect of the proposed free sugar proposition and the closing of the local factory has caused a decided lessening of the revenues of many farmers. All over the country the effect is the same and it is certain that some concerted action will be made to prevent a destruction of what promised to be one of the growing industries of this country by ad-

J. K. CODDING, one time warden of the penitentiary at Leavenworth, where his humane, sympathetic policies with men have made him famous throughout the nation; a speaker of unusual power because of his moral earnestness. Something of the atmosphere which pervaded Dwight L. Moody's meetings characterizes Coddling's Chautauqua speeches. He is particularly friendly toward and interested in boys. verse legislation. In this direction the following news from Washington may be read with interest by men who are interested in the general prosperity of the country and the hope that the present slump in this one industry at least may be stopped if not entirely averted. Unless congress enacts contrary legislation, sugar will go on the free list next May, and there is no doubt that immediately congress convenes an effort will be made to repeal this clause of the Underwood bill. But the free sugar clause was inserted in that bill at the command of President Wilson, and against the urgent advice of Mr. Underwood and the other leaders of the democracy in congress. To assent to its repeal, therefore, would involve an admission by the president that he was wrong, and that, to a man of his temperament, would mean serious humiliation. There is, of course, no doubt that the war taxes, which expire by limitation on January 1st, will be renewed, but they will be wholly insufficient. Of course, the president may prefer to sell Panama bonds, but that will involve the confession that the democrats in two years have converted the $73,000,000 which the republicans left in the treasury into a deficit and must borrow money to run the government during the remainder of their administration. Furthermore, the president will not find the new congress the supine body ready to obey his every mandate which he has enjoyed heretofore. In fact, the democratic leaders are predicting, confidentially, a "cat and dog" time when congress meets again, with nothing but humiliation for the president whichever way the pendulum swings.

FIGHTING HARD.

There are loyal men in the Wisconsin state senate who realize the responsibility of their position. Who realize that the new congress is the people to adjust taxation so that it reached a moderate basis. Who have sought only for the best interests of all concerned in backing the so-called administration measures which had this in view, and while they are in the minority they have the satisfaction of knowing they have done their duty. Citizens and law-makers and deserve the approbation of the taxpayers of the state generally.

The tax-eaters continue in control. They are able to secure enough votes from the weak-minded, easily led senatorial party to swing legislation in channels best suited to their interests. It is unfortunate that communists will continue to send to the upper house of the Wisconsin legislature these weak men who have no minds of their own and are so easily cajoled by smiles, promises and false words that they forget the interests of their constituents and lend themselves to the uses of the clever lobby that holds the whip hand.

It is interesting to note, however, that the very men who are the leaders in the opposition to Governor Phillips are the same men who opposed Governor McGovern two years ago. They evidently do it out of a matter of principle that they are against anything the governor, be he whom he may, desires. They forget the people wish certain matters adjusted and that they elected the legislature to attend to these matters for them. When a combination of the liquor and educational interests can be combined to delay legislation it is time to call a halt.

Nothing is going to aid the cause of prohibition in Wisconsin more than the activity of the liquor lobby at Madison the past few months. The taxpayers are beginning to realize that this interest, entering into a combination with the so-called educational interests, can wield a powerful influence and that it is time to lop off one of the other of them. We can not do without the educational interests, but the liquor element can be eliminated without any impunity.

Meanwhile the administration forces are fighting strenuously for each point they seek to make into laws, and while it has been discouraging thus far, still in the final outcome much will have been accomplished along the desired lines.

Warsaw still continues to be the mirage of the Teutonic forces. Just when they think it is within their reach they are driven back from the Bug river or some other stream and forced to retreat, while Russia continues to keep them so occupied they can not spare any more troops to renew the attack upon the allies in the west.

Thus far nothing has been done towards the erection of that Wisconsin Industrial Home for Women. The Board of Control evidently feels that the Rock county poor farm makes a most admirable substitute.

How to Win.
We have a friend whose face beams like a new cream cheese when he has got better than two pairs. He never won a cent in his life and he never will.

When a man has got four aces he has to look as though he were going to his own funeral. You know how it is, bo.

Opportunities.
No other name
To Burbank's fame
Could ever hold a candle.
If that wise gent
Would but invent
A melon with a handle.

Ah, ah, his worth
Would know no dearth,
But stay forever vernal,
If he could make
A cob and shake
It free from every kernel.

His fame, I'm sure,
Would be secure
If he were only growing
A rooster smart.
That wouldn't start
At 3 a. m. a-crowling.

The Real Question.
The weather bureau is looking forward to fine weather—but how far forward?

Only an Understudy.

Will Give a Program
Here.

Rufus Sampson of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute was in this city this morning making arrangements for the appearance of the Tuskegee Institute Singers, a company of eight men, who will give a concert on the evening of July 28 at the Congregational church. The company is making a tour of the north and has a number of engagements in Wisconsin. They are on the program for five days at the Evansville Chautauqua and will also give a concert in Beloit, previous to the Janesville engagement. The program includes some delightful negro melodies and several readings from "Dunbar and other negro poets. One of the young men will give a brief outline of the work of the school for negroes at Tuskegee. There will be no charge for the concert, but a collection will be taken.

AMERSFOORT UNIVERSITY IS SELDOM HEARD OF

Amsterdam, July 13.—Probably few people outside Holland have heard of the "University of Amersfoort," which although only a few months old embraces on its faculty some of the most distinguished Belgian scientists and scholars. It is unique among educational institutions in that its professors establish their own "chairs," choose their own subjects, and treat them as they wish. They are bound by no official rules and harassed by no traditions. The student enjoys similar freedom. He undergoes no admission examination, chooses his own courses of study and completes them whenever he thinks he has had enough.

Professors and students are members of the Belgian refugee colonies in Holland. After the fall of Antwerp, a large number of Belgian troops crossed the Dutch frontier and were interned at Amersfoort for the duration of the war. The folly of keeping together a large body of men with nothing to occupy their time or to break the monotony of their daily life was at once realized. Professor Shuren of the University of Utrecht made an appeal to refugee Belgian professors, and in January the first term of the University of Amersfoort was opened with a hundred students enrolled. The first course offered was in Pedagogy, under Professor Collard of the University of Louvain.

To the enterprise thus launched, both Belgian and Dutch professors have offered their services generously. The originality of the idea tempted many of them, and gradually the student body has been extended.

LAKE STEAMER CUT IN TWO; SAVE CREW

Crew of Coal Vessel Chocotaw Arrives at Ontario Port Safely.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Port Huron, Mich., July 13.—Capt. Charles Fox and crew of the coal steamer Chocotaw, of the Cleveland and Erie company, which was cut in two at Presque Isle in Lake Huron during fog Monday morning, are safe in port at Sarnia, Ont., opposite here, where they arrived today aboard the steamer Walcott of the Canada Steamship Lines.

The Chocotaw sank immediately after the collision with the Walcott. The latter's bow was punctured and she received a large hole in her side, it is said, but watertight compartments kept her afloat.

According to the report of Capt. D. R. Cornett of the Walcott, the Chocotaw sank so quickly some of the crew could not reach life boats and were compelled to jump overboard. The lake was comparatively calm, however, and they succeeded in keeping afloat until rescued by boats from the Canadian vessel.

The loss of the Chocotaw and her cargo is estimated at least $125,000 and the damage to the Walcott to several thousand dollars.

The Chocotaw was 280 feet long with a beam of 38 feet and a depth of 23 feet. She was built in 1892. The members of the crew left for their homes today.

TO CALIFORNIA.

Take the Superb No-Extra-Fare Train.
On your trip to California this summer your enjoyment will be much greater if your train affords you every convenience and comfort en route.

The ideal train to California is "The Pacific Limited" of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. This famous "train of double destination" goes direct and through without change of cars to both San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It arrives at both California termini in the morning. This is a much appreciated advantage for with hotels likely to be crowded, it is desirable to have all day for getting located.

The fares are so unusually low this year that you will surely want to take full advantage of them. By adding a little to the direct route trip cost you can see the wonderful Pacific North Coast and return through the vast mountain wonderland played by the "Olympians."

This route affords you a greater extent of beautiful and varied scenery viewed from the train than any other road on the continent.

For information about fares, time of trains, sleeping car reservations and for descriptive western literature, apply to local agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.—Advertisement.

PERTINENT QUESTION.

A New York man who says he is thinking of getting married and in the last year has visited quite a number of young ladies, complains that all seemed pretty much alike—same dress, same pose, same remarks. "Now," he says, "as I do not want my wife to be a mere copy or echo of others, I should like to know if there is anything original in the way of a girl nowadays, and if so, where is she to be found?" How original is the young man himself?—Exchange.

REPEAL PAMPHLETS WITH NO ARGUMENT; QUASH BUTTER BILL

Hansen Measure Throwing Out Election Booklets Favored by Assembly—Other Resolutions.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, July 13.—Not a word of commendation or condemnation marked the passing of the Hansen bill in the assembly today for the repeal of the election pamphlets. This bill, which the law, which directs the secretary of state to send a pamphlet containing the paid statement of candidates for office to every voter in the state ten days before the primary and before election.

The assembly passed the Dickie bill, giving state aid to rural school teachers, killed the Crosby direct all butter and cheese makers bill, and received a resolution from Assemblyman Hansen directing the attorney general to recover money spent by the inspection investigating committee on investigations outside the state.

A plea for eliminating duplication of inspection by the president of the boards of control, health, dairy and food and oil departments was made by Senator Platt Whitman in speaking for the administration's bill merging the several boards into a board of public welfare. No action was taken before the senate recessed until 2 p. m.

The senate concurred in the assembly resolution creating a joint committee to revise the land laws.

Curious Fish of Wisconsin Waters

—THE PADDLEFISH.
Prepared for The Gazette by the Department of Zoology of the University of Wisconsin.
In the accounts of his travels through Wisconsin, Father Marquette describes a queer fish he saw in the Mississippi river. "Near its nose," he says, "is a large bone shaped like a paddle, and it is very wide and a cubit long, at the end of which is a curl as wide as one's hand." To any one who knows the fishes of the region this description is plain. It was a paddlefish that Marquette saw, undoubtedly the oldest fish in North America.

It is a relative of the sturgeons, and reaches a size of six or eight feet, and a weight of one hundred pounds. Its skin is smooth, its head very large, and on the head is born the paddle that gives it its name. The paddle is a long, narrow, flat, and is very much flattened, supported by bone, and its surface is covered with little pits arranged in groups. Zoologists have found that these pits are connected with nerve fibers running to the brain and undoubtedly are sense organs of some sort. Their function must be the function of the paddle. But what is it? To answer this, what the creature feeds on must be observed.

The mouth of the paddlefish lies in a shark's and is if anything bigger than that of a shark. The mouth of a seventy five pound paddlefish will easily take in a baby's head. But this fish is not a shark, and there are no sharp teeth are weak. But over the openings to the gills from the mouth, is an arrangement of slender bars, forming an exceedingly fine screen or sieve. And when the stomach is reached it is filled wholly by small creatures just barely visible with the naked eye.

The sieve-like arrangement serves to gather these from the water as it enters the mouth and passes out through the gills. These small creatures occur everywhere in the water, but are more numerous in places than in others. It is very probable that the long paddle serves as a sort of tester to inform the fish when he is in a region of plenty, so that he may open his capacious mouth and take in a meal.

For many years the paddlefish was considered worthless. Then it was sent to the city markets as an experiment, and found ready a sale that it is now a serious danger of extermination. Most of it probably reaches the ultimate consumer as smoked "sturgeon." Unfortunately no measure of protection can be suggested.

For all protective measures with fishes must be based on knowledge of their breeding habits. Here is a fish of which thousands of pounds are taken annually, yet no one knows where or when it deposits its eggs. Various competent zoologists have spent whole summers on the problem, but with no result. Indeed up to a few years ago no specimens were known less than eight inches in length; of that size there were about six or eight, three of which are in the zoological department of the University of Wisconsin. Since then several specimens about two or three inches in length have been taken, but without giving any clue to the spawning habits. Here, then, is a job for some aspiring young naturalist. The discovery of spawning grounds and developing eggs of the paddlefish will give to him who achieves it a very reasonable measure of fame.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH H. CAMERON

WHAT SHALL SHE DO.
"My daughter is very anxious to study to become an interior decorator," writes a letter friend. "I had planned for her to be a teacher as I always wanted to be. I shall have to make more or less sacrifice for her education in either case. Now my daughter is clever and I believe she could do one thing as well as another, if she would only put her mind to it. Don't you think I have a right to urge her to carry out my wishes?"
Frankly, my friend, I do not.

Not unless you have good reason to think she has no ability in the line she wants to follow.
You simply state that she has a good deal of general ability, and say that she can do one thing as well as another, if she puts her mind to it. That's a big mistake. She may be able to do either thing, but not equally well.

One Thing We Each Do Best.
We all have a certain amount of energy which we can turn in one direction or another. It will not accomplish the same amount in one direction as another. It will not accomplish the same amount in the direction in which it must overcome the barrier of a natural disinclination and inborn awkwardness as it will in the direction in which natural inclination and facility give it a clear channel.
The line of least resistance is the line of most accomplishment in the matter of talent.

Some Parents Who Chose Ill.
The history of genius is full of examples of parents who insisted on choosing their children's vocations against their natural bent.
Sir Walter Scott was put into the law, and the years that might have given us half a dozen more wonderful novels produced only law briefs.
Galileo, the great mathematician, never studied mathematics at all until he was twenty, because his father had made up his mind to have him a doctor and didn't think he needed to know anything about the subject.
Aristotle lost five years studying law.

An Income of $200,000 Risked.
In our own days Madame Schumann-Heink had to contend with a father who objected violently to her using her voice. Think what the world would have lost if he had succeeded in repressing her into a purely domestic life, to say nothing of her own loss of world fame and an income of almost $200,000 a year.

These are some of those who eventually persisted in expressing themselves in their own way. How many succumbed and followed the paths into which they were pushed, how many mute, inglorious Miltons of one sort or another have been made in this way, we cannot know.
Of course, I do not mean that your daughter will necessarily set the world afire if she is allowed to follow her bent. But if she really has a bent that way and not merely a passing fancy, she will doubtless do more than if you force her energy into an obstructed channel.
N. E.—Young folks with artistic leanings, but no decided talent, are not to consider this an argument for them.

Glimpses of Married Life

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Why didn't you tell me you were out of money? I never have refused to give you money when I had it." Dick's tone was hard.

"I know I had no business to get the dress, situated as we are, in debt to the doctor—but—Jo Parsons was a sending for one and before I had time to fight the temptation I had yielded and sent in my order. I think I must have been demoralized by the knowledge that you have inherited money and it would make it right." Neil was very apologetic, but Dick gave a snort.

"I am tired of asking for every cent I spend for things I have." "Why, Neil," interrupted Dick, "what I objected to was being plunged deeper in debt without my knowledge or consent." "Please let me finish," continued Neil. "Olive said when she was here that she thought it unbusinesslike for me to have no allowance. I told her I could see no special benefit to come from having one, as every cent is carefully spent, but I have changed my mind. I want to have some money that is my own. Then if I am extravagant I alone will suffer. I would have to do without something as a result of my lack of judgment."

"As it is, we discuss every important purchase and it is a matter of our combined judgment, and I like the method," Dick leaned back in his chair and thrust his hands in his pockets. "You did not consult me before buying the baby carriage and you—surprise, but—"

"And you never consult me about your clothes," continued Neil ignoring the interruption. "But I have to explain what clothes I want and when, and then you sit in judgment on the matter and decide whether I can have the things or not. Such a state of things is humiliating to say the least."

"My dear, I can't see why. I want you to have everything I can possibly afford to get you. It isn't as if I were stingy and refused you anything I could get."

"Perhaps not, but it would amount to the same thing if you would decide just what you could afford to let me have to dress myself and the baby with, and then turn it over without my asking for it."

"You don't spend regularly so much a week and if you did not need other things that are needed? If I can't save or sensible to hand you $5 to tuck away in a stocking while I

A BLUE TAFFETA AFTERNOON GOWN

In the meantime am unable to get the full amount of a debt together."

Neil looked irritated. "I don't think that it's because you think I'll shipwreck our finances by being wasteful because I do not consult you. You want to be consulting engineer and you may as well confess it."

"Well, there is something in that," Dick admitted. "But I take a great deal of pride in seeing you look well, and this absolutely the first purchase of yours I ever objected to." "It's the very first purchase larger than a spool of thread that I have made without your advice and consent," said Neil with some bitterness. "If my memory serves me right, I believe there was a gale of words over the purchase of the baby carriage, that you thought expensive. How is that?" asked Dick.

"The whole crux of the matter is each of us should have a certain part of the money to spend and not feel that an account is to be rendered. If I would have had no right to object to your buying a baby carriage, and you could not have been disgusted over my getting a dress," Neil was very earnest about the matter.

"Well," capitulated Dick, "you submit plans and specifications as to what you think you will need and committee on finance," and Dick smiled into her earnest face.

STONEHENGE MAY BE SOLD IF MONEY CAN BE RAISED
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, July 13.—The statement of Sir Cosmo Anthonis, owner of Stonehenge, that he will consider the sale of the old Druidic monument apart from the surrounding estate, has revived the scheme for its purchase. As the oldest human monument in England, Stonehenge has always appealed to popular imagination. But owing ing to the drain on the public purse in war charities it is questionable whether sufficient money could be raised now.

1905, the owner of the Stonehenge of that time refused $50,000 for the roadways leading to it which he had obstructed. This offer was made by the Footpath Preservation society. The new law of 1913, which enables the authorities to prevent the destruction of historic monuments, makes the work of purchase much easier than before, if the money can be raised.

Household Hints

SALADS.

Picnic Salad.—Lettuce leaves washed and chilled can be tied in a linen napkin and placed in a tin with a close cover. This will keep them crisp for forty-eight hours. A fine grade of canned shrimps is now in use. The shrimps are mixed with mayonnaise and placed on lettuce leaves, on top of which thin shreds of Mexican red pimiento are interlarded. Dressing—Lettuce cut in small cubes, and half cup pecans. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise dressing.

Cream Cheese and Currant Jelly Salad.—Arrange lettuce leaves on large round plate. On it pile lightly Dutch or cream cheese forced through a potato ricer, leaving the lettuce to form a border around the edge. In the center put half a glass of currant jelly. Serve with French dressing.

Cadillac Cucumber Salad.—Pare cucumber and remove a thick slice from each end. With a sharp, pointed knife make eight grooves at equal distances lengthwise of cucumber; then cut in thin slices crosswise, keeping in original shape. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with following dressing: Parisian French Dressing—Take a pint glass jar, half cup salad oil, five tablespoons vinegar, half teaspoon powdered sugar, one tablespoon finely chopped onion, four red peppers, eight green peppers, one teaspoon salt. Let stand one hour, then shake until well blended. The red and green peppers are the small ones found in pepper sauce.

Fruit Salad.—Cut marshmallows in thin strips (there should be one and one-half quarts), add two cups pineapple cut in small cubes, four plums which have been peeled and quartered, half cup nut meats, and a few grains of salt. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with following dressing: Cream Dressing—Mix two tablespoons flour, one tablespoon each of salt, sugar and mustard, and a few grains of cayenne. Add two slightly beaten eggs, one and one-half cups scalded milk, and half cup vinegar, very slowly. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Add four tablespoons butter, strain, when mixture cools, add an equal quantity of whipped cream.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Absorbent Cotton for Dress Shields.—During the summer, keeping in a supply of dress shields is quite a problem. An inexpensive and very satisfactory way of solving this problem is to buy a neckerchief of absorbent cotton and lightly stitch a thin layer of cotton wool to each corner. The neckerchief will last for three or four wears, and can be wiped out and renewed. This is white and dainty and absorbs perspiration readily and without odor.

To Keep Flies Out of Sick Room.—Put some oil of lavender in a saucer and pour hot water over it. Place in bedroom and it will keep room clear of flies and such pests as warm weather brings up.

A Fine Vanish Remover.—Two parts denatured alcohol, one part turpentine; this does the work perfectly and is much cheaper than prepared vanish removers.
Chloride of Lime, as a bleaching agent, is not destructive to a fabric if it is properly followed by a rinse water in which ammonia has been added. This counteracts the chloride of lime and the results are harmless.

If you have several lemons and do not use them right away, a very good way to keep them is by placing each lemon under a glass.

HOME-MADE DUSTER.
To make a "dustless dust cloth" place a cloth in a strong, hot suds of pure soap, to which add a few drops of turpentine; let set for two hours; then wring out dry. Cloths treated in this way will hold the dust and at the same time give a brilliant polish to furniture. Treat the cloths in this manner every two weeks.

BADGER JEWELERS HEAR ADVICE TO GUARD THEFT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., July 13.—Police Chief Janssen today gave Wisconsin jewelers a few pointers on prevention of theft. His advice was embodied in a speech before the Wisconsin Retail Jewelers' association, which opened its annual convention in the Hotel Wisconsin this morning. Other speakers were John L. Shepard of New York, who spoke on fixing selling prices, and Charles T. Higginbotham of South Bend, Ind., who gave an address on the repair department. President William H. Upmeyer presided.

TODAY'S BEAUTY SUGGESTIONS.

Face powder simply covers up an unattractive complexion and leaves no lasting benefits. Those who have tried a simple spumax face lotion find it much better, as it removes skin discolorations, such as freckles and tan, and makes the skin smooth, white, and velvety. This lotion is made by dissolving four ounces of spumax in one-half pint hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This complexion beautifier does not rub off or show like powder and gives a more refined appearance. It removes both shininess and sallowness, rapidly giving the skin a permanent healthy, youthful appearance.

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be had at trifling expense by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Advertisement.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) If a girl refuses to speak to a boy after he has been very kind to her, should she make an apology?

(2) Should a girl give a boy her picture?
(3) What should a girl do if a boy insists upon talking love?
(4) Is it polite for a girl to call a Ford a "Tin Lizzy" when in the company of a young man?
(5) A friend of mine keeps telling me that he loves me and wishes I would marry him. Do you think I should mean it? He is only sixteen and I am fifteen.
THREE DARLINGS.
(1) She should give the reason why she did not speak.

(2) I do not think girls should give away their pictures promiscuously. In some cases, where they have known each other for years, it is all right for a girl to give a boy her picture, however.

(3) A boy will not insist upon making love if he knows the girl does not like it. After she shows that she is not interested in what he keeps still, at least for a time. If he starts the subject later, she can again show him that she does not like what he has to say.

(4) The use of slang by a girl makes her less ladylike.
(5) When a boy of sixteen loves, his love is not at all likely to be lasting. You are both too young to think seriously of love.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What tint of powder should a person with dark brown hair and eyes and a pale skin use?
(2) Would these colors be becoming?

"I believe that to be true," he hastily assured her, glad to be able to agree with her upon something.

"But it is in spite of the church, not because of it," she immediately added. "You can't say that there is a tremendous moral influence in a congregation which numbers eight hundred, and sends less than fifty to services. The balance show their devotion to Christianity by a quarterly check."

Rev. Smith Boyd felt unfairly hit. "That is the sorrow of the church," he sadly confessed; "the lukewarmness of its followers."

She felt a trace of compunction for him; but why had he gone into the ministry?

"Can you blame them?" she demanded, as much aggrieved as if she had suffered a personal distress.

The rector flushed as if he had been struck, and he turned to Gail with that cold look in his green eyes. "That is too deep a subject to discuss here, but if you will permit me, I will take it up with you at the house," he quietly returned, and there was a dogged compulsion in his tone. "I shall be highly interested in the defense," accepted Gail, with an aggravating smile.

There seemed to be but very little to say after that, and they walked silently up the hill together towards the yellow camp fire, fuming inwardly at each other. Near the top of the hill her emerald scarf came loose at the throat, and, with her numbed hands, she could not locate the little clasp with which it had been held.

"May I help you?" offered the rector, constraining himself to politeness. "Thank you." She was extremely sweet about it, and he reached up to perform the courtesy. The rounded column of her neck was white as marble in the moonlight, and, as he sought the clasps, his fingers, drawn from his woolen gloves, touched her warm throat, and they tingled. He started as if he had received an electric shock, and as he looked into her eyes, a purple mist seemed to spring between them. He mechanically fastened the clasps, though his fingers trembled. "Thank you," again said Gail, and he did not notice that her voice was unusually low. She went on over to the group gathered around the fire, but Rev. Smith Boyd stood where she had left him, staring stupidly at the ground. He was in a whirl of bewilderment, amid which there was some unreasoning resentment, but beneath it all there was an inexplicable sadness.

"Just in time for the Palisade special," called Lucille Teasdale. "I don't know," laughed Gail. "I think of going on a private car this trip," and she sought among the group for distraction from certain oppressive thoughts. Allison, and Lucille and Ted and Arly, were among the more familiar figures, besides a startling Adonis, proudly introduced as Dick Rodley, by Arlene, early in the evening, with an air which plainly stated that he was a personal discovery for which she gave herself great credit.

"The Palisade special will not start without Miss Sargent," he declared, bending upon her an ardent gaze, and bestowing upon her a smile which displayed a flash of perfect white teeth.

Gail breathlessly thought him the most dangerously handsome thing she had ever seen, but she missed the foreign accent in him. That would have made him complete.

"I'm sorry that the Palisade special will be delayed," she coolly told him, but she tempered the deliberateness of that decision with an upward and sidelong glance, which she was startled to recognize in herself as distinct coquetry.

"I have a prior claim," laughed Allison, stepping up and taking her by the arm. "It's my turn to guide Miss Sargent on the two-passenger sled."

There was something new about Allison tonight. There was the thrill and the exultation of youth in his voice, and twenty years seemed to have been dropped from his age. There was an intensity about him, too, and also a proprietorlike compulsion, which decided Gail on a certain diversion she had entertained. She was oppressed with men tonight. The world was full of them, and they had closed too nearly around her.

Suddenly she broke away with a laugh, and, taking the two-passenger sled from Smith Boyd, who still stood in preoccupation at the edge of the group, she picked it up and ran with it, and threw herself face forward on it, as she had done when she was a kid, and shot down the hill, to the intense disapproval of Reverend Boyd! Dick Rodley, ever alert in his chosen profession, grabbed a light steel racer from the edge of the bank, and, with a magnificent run, slapped himself on the sled and darted in pursuit! The rector's lip curled the barest trace at one corner, but Edward E. Allison, looking down the hill, grinned, and lit a cigar.

"Coming Allison?" called Cunningham. "There's room for you both, doctor."

"I don't think I'll ride this trip, thanks," returned Allison, and, as the rector also declined with pleasant thanks, Allison gave the voyagers a hearty push, and walked back to the camp fire.

"I received the ultimatum of your vestry today, Doctor Boyd," observed Allison when they were alone. "Still that eventual fifty million."

"Well, yes," returned the rector briskly, and backed up comfortably to the blaze. He was a different man now. "We discussed your proposition thoroughly, and decided that, in ten years, the property is worth fifty million to you; for the purpose you have in mind. Consequently why take less?"

Allison surveyed him shrewdly for a moment. "That's the argument of a bandit," he remarked. "Why accept all that the prisoner has when his friends can raise a little more?"

"I don't see the use of metaphor," retorted the rector, who dealt professionally in it. "Business is business." Allison grinned, and flicked his ashes into the fire.

"By George, you're right," he agreed. "I've been trying to handle you like a church, but now I'm going after you like the business organization you are."

Rev. Smith Boyd reddened. The charge that Market Square church was a remarkably lucrative enterprise was becoming too general for comfort.

"The vestry has given you their decision," he returned, standing stiff and straight, with his hands clasped behind him. "You may pay for the Veder court tenement property a cash sum which, in ten years, will accrue to fifty million dollars, or you may let it alone," and his tone was as forcefully crisp as Allison's, though he could not hide the musical timbre of it.

"I won't pay that price, and I won't let the property alone," Allison snapped back. "The city needs it."

For a moment the two men looked each other levelly in the eyes. There seemed to have sprung up some new enmity between them. A thick man with a stubby mustache came puffing up to the fire, and sat down on his sled with a thump.

"Splendid exercise," he gasped, holding his sides. "I think about a week of it would either reduce me to a living skeleton, or kill me."

"Your vestry's an ass," Allison took pleasure in informing him.

"Same to you and many of them," puffed Jim Sargent. "What's the trouble with you? Trying to take a business advantage of a church."

"I'd have a better chance with a Jew," was Allison's contemptuous reply.

"Oh, see here, Allison!" remonstrated Jim Sargent seriously. He even rose to his feet to make it more emphatic. "You mustn't treat Market Square church with so much indignity."

"Why not? Market Square church puts itself in a position to be considered in the light of any other grasping organization."

Rev. Smith Boyd, finding in himself the growth of a most uncouthlike anger, decided to walk away rather than suffer the aggravation which must ensue in this conversation. Consequently, he started down the hill, dragging Jim Sargent's sled behind him for company. There were no further insults to the church, however.

"Jim, what are the relations of the Towanda Valley to the L. and C.?" asked Allison, offering Sargent a cigar. "Largely paternal," and the president of the Towanda Valley grinned. "We feed it when it's good and spank it when it cries."

"Hold control of the stock?" "No, only its transportation," returned Sargent complacently.

"Stock is a good deal scattered, I suppose?"

Small holdings entirely, and none of the holders proud," replied Sargent. "It starts no place and comes right back, and the shareholders won't pay postage to send in their annual proxies."

"Then the stock doesn't seem to be worth buying," observed Allison, with vast apparent indifference.

"Only to piece out a collection," chuckled Sargent. "I didn't know you were interested in railroads."

"I wasn't a week ago," and Allison looked out across the starry sky to the tree-scaled hills. "With the completion of the consolidation of New York's transportation system, and the building of a big central station, I thought I was through. It seemed a big achievement to gather all these lines to a common center, like holding them in my hand; to converge four millions of people to one point, to handle them without confusion, and to redistribute them along the same lines, looked like a life's work; but now I'm beginning to become ambitious."

"Oh, I see," grinned Jim Sargent. "You want to do something you can really call a job. If I remember rightly, you started with an equipment of four horse cars and two miles of rusted rail. What do you want to conquer next?"

Allison glanced down the hill, then back out across the starlit sky. Some new fervor had possessed him tonight which made him a poet, and loosened his tongue which, previous to this, could almost calculate its utterances in percentage.

"The world," he said.

CHAPTER V.

Edward E. Allison Takes a Vacation.

Edward E. Allison walked into the offices of the Municipal Transportation company at nine o'clock, and set his basket of opened and carefully annotated letters out of the mathematical center of his desk; then he touched a button and a thin young man, whose brow, at twenty, wore the traces of preternatural age, walked briskly in. "Take Mr. Gregory these letters and ask him if he will be kind enough to step here."

"Free as Air," He Gayly Told Her.

"Yes, sir," and the concentrated young man departed with the basket, feeling that he had quite capably borne his weight of responsibility.

Gregory walked in, a fat man with no trace of nonsense about him.

"Out for the day, Ed?" he surmised, gauging that probability by the gift of the letters.

"A month or so," amended Allison, rising and surveying the other articles on his desk calculatingly. "I'm going to take a vacation."

"It's about time," agreed his efficient general manager. "I think it's been four years since you stopped to take a breath. Going to play a little?"

"That's the word," and Allison chuckled like a boy.

"I suppose we'll have your address," suggested Gregory.

"No."

Gregory pondered frowningly. He began to see a weight piling up on him and, though he was capable, he loved his flesh.

"About that Shell Beach extension?" he inquired. "There's likely to be trouble with the village of Waveview. Their local franchisees—"

"Settle it yourself," directed Allison carelessly, and Gregory stared. During the long and arduous course of Allison's climb, he had built his success on personal attention to detail. "Good-by," and Allison walked out, lighting a cigar on his way to the door.

He stopped his runabout in front of a stationer's and bought the largest globe they had in stock.

"Address, please?" asked the clerk, pencil poised over delivery slip.

"I'll take it with me," and Allison helped them secure the clumsy thing in the seat beside him. Then he streaked up the avenue to the small and severely furnished house where four ebony servants protected him from the world.

"Out of town except to this list," he directed his kinky-haired old butler, and going into the heavy oak library, he closed the door. On the wall, depending from the roller case, was a huge map, a broad familiar domain between two oceans, and he smiled as his eye fell upon that tiny territory near the Atlantic, which, up to now, he had called a world, because he had mastered it.

His library phone rang.

"Mr. Allison?" a woman's voice. Gail Sargent, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Davies, or Lucille Teasdale. No other ladies were on his list. The voice was not that of Gail. "Are you busy tonight?" Oh, yes, Lucille Teasdale.

"You want to do something you can really call a job. If I remember rightly, you started with an equipment of four horse cars and two miles of rusted rail. What do you want to conquer next?"

Allison glanced down the hill, then back out across the starlit sky. Some new fervor had possessed him tonight which made him a poet, and loosened his tongue which, previous to this, could almost calculate its utterances in percentage.

"The world," he said.

"You remember that chap Jones who made a bet of ten thousand dollars that he would walk from San Francisco to New York without a cent in his pocket?"

"Yes. Did he win the bet?"

"Not quite. He got as far as Philadelphia, and there he was arrested as a vagrant and forced against his will to ride three blocks in a patrol wagon. That disqualified him."

"What has become of young Lightfoot? You know who I mean—the chap who danced so well. He always knew the latest steps."

"Oh, he's learning the lockstep now. His employer found out that he was using the firm's funds to finance his visits to the tango parlors."

It is difficult in Germany for a professional rogue to enter a family as a domestic servant. There every servant has a character book, in which the mistress must enter the dates of the coming and leaving of the servant, with her character while in service. This the girl is obliged to take to the nearest police station and have it dated with the official stamp.

JOHNSON SAVES THE DAY FOR THE WASHINGTON NINE

Chicago, July 12.—Pitchers in the final game of the Sox-Washington series yesterday handed out sixteen base-on-balls and this with the weak hitting formed a combination that beat the Sox by the score of 5 to 3. As Boston faced the Tigers, 15 to 12, the Sox are now but a game ahead.

Ed Kieffer and Tex Russell, for the Sox, and Jim Shaw did the bumping, and the battle wound up with two real pitchers on the mound. Ed Kieffer stopped the parade of base men around the bases on passes after the game had been pitched away in the fifth inning. In the eighth Shaw was ranked and Johnson was sent to break the tide, and the mighty Walter turned the trick.

Cubs Drop Game 3-2. Brooklyn's firing Robins made it four straight over the slipping Cubs yesterday, showing them down until a bare lead entitles them to first place. The count was 3 to 2 in a depressed game, and the Cubs clung to the lead only because Philadelphia took a double beating. With the score one in the sixth inning, Miller hit a long drive, which Williams caught. A runner on second started to make third on the catch, and on the throw in Zimmerman failed to catch the ball and allowed the runner to score from second on failing to run after the escaped ball. One more run made things sure for the Robins in this inning. George Pierce started and hit for the straining of a shoulder muscle the results might have been different. South, a recent southpaw, hurried for Brooklyn, and aided by splendid support showed big league form.

HARMONY WINS VICTORY OVER DILLON'S NINE, 1-0.

PITCHED BALL FRACTURES SKULL OF MENOMINEE MAN

The big fellow knocked out Les O'Donnell in three rounds, Gordon Goughill in three rounds and Ben Doyle in two rounds in Australia. He weighs 210 pounds now and is fast and clever.

MORRIS MILLER

Umpire Bill Brennan, once thought good enough to umpire in the National league, but now chief of umpires in the Federal, pulled a new one the other day in Brooklyn. He ruled a man could not score from third on a balk. After a matter of the rule book was explained to him he announced that the ruling had been made for that day only and that hereafter a runner from third would be allowed to advance on a balk.

William L. Hayward, trainer of the University of Oregon track team, has been selected to handle the Pacific Northwest athletes who will take part in the exposition sports at San Francisco.

In addition to battling for the pennant with his Memphis team, Bris Lord leads the Southern association batters with a mark of .350. Tim Hendryx, former Nap, being second with .332.

There are only a few dyed-in-the-wool fans in the South Atlantic league who can keep track of the managers of the eight clubs. Here's the latest switch in the managerial ranks: George Stinson, pitcher Ed Foster succeeding him. Stinson will manage the Charleston club, succeeding Ed Sabie. Sabie had stepped into Ed Reagan's shoes recently.

Here's a new way to get a winning pitch. Take a losing hurler out behind the club house and beat him into a winner. The novel idea was unearthed by Jack Holland, manager of the St. Joseph Western league club. Jack had about decided to release one of his hurlers who was going poorly. Then he got a brilliant idea. He escorted the pitcher around to a quiet spot in the rear of the club house and waded in him. Folk says he did a good job. Then he released his victim that as long as he could pitch winning ball he had a berth on the club. The idea worked fine. Jack has become a winning hurler.

Minor league club owners don't hold any hard feelings against a manager when they can his as leader. And the players don't look down on him, either. He just simply hands over the reins by request and keeps on playing ball. Eddie Justice, successor of the Dubuque Three league club, is one recent example. Roland Bartows, replaced by Catcher Walter Hearn as leader of the Lowell New England league club, is another. Both men still are playing with the clubs they formerly managed.

You can't tell a ball player by the size of his check. Walter Johnson gets $12,000 or more per season. Others get from $6,000 to $10,000. Grover Cleveland Alexander, who has pitched three one-hit games within as many weeks, gets $5,400 a year. He signed for that amount and yet there isn't a pitcher in baseball, not excepting anyone who deserves more money than the Phillies star.

Not only has New Orleans given the world a formidable lightweight in Joe Mandel, but it promises to produce a real bantam in Kid Herman, who recently administered a severe trouncing to the veteran Louisiana, who, as will be remembered, twice knocked down Champion Kid Williams in a recent Philadelphia bout. Louisiana was no match for Herman, and if he is to be rated as a real contender, young Herman must receive consideration. Herman met Williams about a year ago and was beaten after a creditable fight.

The minors aren't so far behind the majors when it comes to the signing of the major league season. The big fellow knocked out Les O'Donnell in three rounds, Gordon Goughill in three rounds and Ben Doyle in two rounds in Australia. He weighs 210 pounds now and is fast and clever.

Pete Allison, with Memphis, showed Southern league fans some real pinch hitting recently. He poked out five hits in five times up and every bit scored a runner.

Friuli, That Territory Italy Now Claims Hers

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, D. C., July 12.—The National Geographic Society explains to Americans who follow developments in the European war what is meant by the district of Friuli, which district the Italians claim to have completely overrun.

"Friuli is the lowland and hill region at the head of the Adriatic Sea, in ancient times one of the 28 duchies into which the Langobardi divided Northern Italy, and, since 1866, divided between Italy and Austria. The Friuli district includes the Italian province of Udine and the district of Portogruaro, and the Austrian provinces of Goerz and Gradisca, together with the so-called Idrian district.

The lower slopes of the Julian Alps in the north, and of the Carnic Alps in the east are included in Friuli. The southern part of this region is a rich alluvial plain, gently into the Adriatic, and watered by the Isone and several lesser streams.

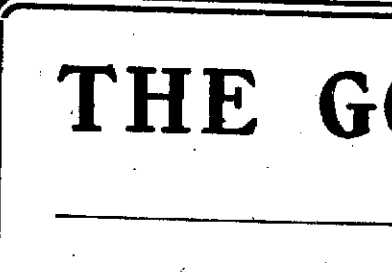

The whole district, Italian and Austrian, includes about 3,500 square miles of area. It supports about 700,000 people, largely an agricultural population, and for the most part Italian-speaking. The inhabitants of the ancient duchy are called farlanians. Their speech differs from that of the peninsula Italians, in that it is very strongly modified by Celtic words. Fanny fruits, wines, grapes and grains give lavishly in Friuli's mild climate. The table fruits grown here are known as luxury throughout Europe.

The present division of this coastal land, that of Venetian and Tyrolean Friuli, was recognized at an early period. Tyrolean Friuli came into the possession of Austria in 1500, and Venetian Friuli became Austrian by the Peace of Campo Formio in 1807. The Venetian division was brought back to the Italian fold in 1866, and now the Italians claim to have placed the ancient Austrian division behind their lines.

W-D CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco-satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.

CLOTHING WORKERS OPEN STRIKE TODAY

Ten Thousand Garment Workers Walk Out Demanding More Sanitary Working Conditions.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, July 13.—A garment workers' strike, the first for several years, has begun, when 10,000 makers left their shops. The principal demands of the workers are for a sanitary shop, recognition of the union and an increase in wages.

A meeting of delegates of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America is in progress today to discuss the feasibility of calling out an additional $10,000 of the workers in the men's clothing industry belonging to unions affiliated with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Iron Workers Out.
Bridgeport, Conn., July 13.—About 300 structural iron workers at the Remington Arms Company's plant struck today because of differences between unions employed there as to jurisdiction over installing certain machinery. The millwrights and carpenters, both of which unions are members of the allied metal trades, claim jurisdiction.

JOPLIN STRIKE ENDS AT OLD WAGE SCALE

Every Mine in District Resumes Operations Today.—Union Is Not Recognized.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Joplin, Mo., July 13.—A strike of nearly 5,000 lead and zinc miners, which began here two weeks ago, was ended and every mine in the district resumed operations. There was no settlement. Capt. Pliny Norcross's Body Found in Race Shortly After Eight O'clock This Morning; Drowning, On Sunday Afternoon, Accidental

Mysterious Disappearance of Mr. Norcross On Sunday is Cleared Up With Recovery of Body--Failure to Keep Appointment With His Son On Monday Led to Apprehension

Arrived in Janesville Friday Evening for a Visit

Was For More Than Forty Years a Resident of This City, Serving It Two Terms as Mayor and Two Terms as City Attorney--Was Four Times Elected to the Assembly--Was Elected Department Commander of Wisconsin G. A. R. in 1904--77 Years of Age

Discovery of the body of Captain Pliny Norcross in the old race way between the Rock River Cotton company and the Blodgett Milling company shortly after eight this morning, brings to end the suspense that his family and friends have sustained since early Monday morning when it was discovered he had not been at the Myers Hotel where he was stopping, since Sunday noon.

Captain Norcross arrived in Janesville on Friday evening last from Troy, Pennsylvania, where he is spending the summer. He expected to be in Janesville for several days and delighted his friends by his robust appearance and apparent splendid health. His son, John V. Norcross and family, of Chicago, were guests in the city at the residence of Mrs. Norcross' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Ruger Sr., and Captain Norcross took dinner with them there on Sunday.

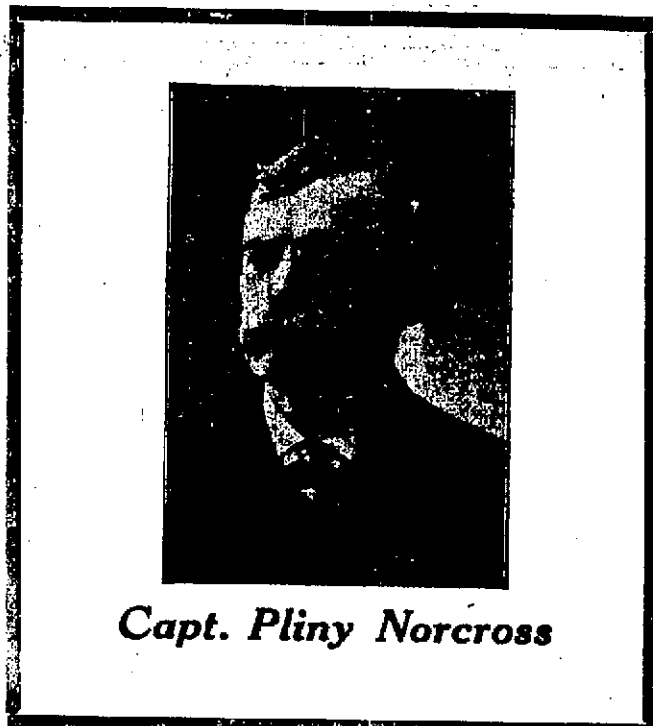

He left, stating he was going to the hotel to take a nap and later would go to tea with them at a friend's home. Evidently he did not go to the hotel but walked over toward the old milling property he owned some years ago to investigate any changes that might have been made. He was seen going in that direction shortly before the cry went up that a man had fallen in the race-way, but no one connected the missing man with Captain Norcross until late Monday afternoon.

It is evident that in walking along the board sidewalk that borders the race, his hat blew off and in reaching for it he lost his balance and fell into the water, his head striking a sunken piece of timber and entangling the body so that he did not rise again to the surface. The only trace that anyone had drowned was a floating panama hat which late Monday afternoon was partially identified as Captain Norcross' property.

A quiet search was made all day Monday by relatives who had become worried over his absence from the hotel but it was thought he might have gone away with friends and would return. It was not until the hat was partially identified did the Sunday drowning become connected with Captain Norcross's disappearance.

As soon as it was known Monday afternoon that Captain Norcross was missing the police took up the dragging of the mill-race with renewed determination. From four o'clock until a late hour men equipped with grapple hooks and pike poles went over every inch of the race and removed a large part of the drift wood at the grates. One boat with three men searched under the Blodgett buildings where it was thought the victim of the accident might have fallen between the platform and building. For three hours they dragged under here while the police officer searched by the side of the grates.

This morning when it was ascertained that Norcross was still missing an added force of men were put to work on the mill-race north of the power grates. In one boat Helgeson and Gehrki used grapple hooks further up the race near the east bank, about fifty feet from the grates. Gehrki hooked an object down in the twelve foot of water and the points loosened. On dragging again he managed to secure a firm hold on the body with the hook, and pulled it to the surface. The body was taken to shore and Dr. Charles Sutherland was called who ordered the body removed from the scene. At the Ryan's undertaking rooms the body was positively identified as Captain Norcross by friends of the deceased.

Capt. Pliny Norcross

Honorable Pliny Norcross was one of Janesville's most influential citizens for many years. A lawyer by profession, he served four years as district attorney of Rock county, from 1871 to 1875 and 1876. He sat in the mayor's chair for two terms, 1877 to 1878 and has four times represented the Janesville District in the state legislature; first in 1867 and again in 1885, and in 1905 to 1907. His intellectual capability and his moral worth have commanded respect and his kindly impulses, generous nature and genial disposition and charitable instincts made him universally popular.

Mr. Norcross was born in the town of Templeton, Worcester county, Mass., November 16, 1838. His father, Franklin Norcross, a farmer and lumberman in his native state, and who removed from Massachusetts to Wisconsin in 1852, settling in La Grange, Walworth county, married Lydia Powers. To this union there was born three sons and two daughters.

His father died in 1875, in his sixty-third year, his wife surviving him until August, 1892, when she died at Denver, Colo., at the age of seventy-seven. Daniel Norcross, the father of Franklin and grandfather of Pliny, was a descendant from early Colonial stock, and his wife, the grandmother of Pliny, was a descendant of an old Puritan family.

Pliny Norcross came to Walworth county with his parents in 1852. He attended Milton Academy for two years and was at the state university for a short time. On April 16, 1861, he enlisted in company K, 1st Wisconsin infantry, under Capt. Lucius Fairchild, being the first student to enlist in the war for the Union. Later, he enlisted in Co. K of the 12th and for three years he was captain of this company. Two of his brothers served in his company and one died, while in service under him.

Mr. Norcross was married January 4th, 1865, to Phoebe A. Poole, only daughter of John H. and Elizabeth Poole. The children of this marriage were Frances M., John H. and Elizabeth Poole. In the spring of 1865, Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Norcross settled in the city of Janesville. Mr. Norcross was law partner of the late Judge John R. Bennett from 1866 to 1873, then a year with Honorable A. A. Jackson, and from 1876 to 1893 was in partnership with Honorable B. F. Dunwiddie, late judge of the twelfth circuit. Upon the dissolution of the firm of Norcross and Dunwiddie, Mr. Norcross gave up the practice of law and went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and in company with two Englishmen, Messrs. Ivery and Bulver, organized the International Tile company, of which he was president. After the factory was erected, he sold out his interest and returned to Janesville, and in the fall of 1883, he erected the Norcross block on River street, and in the summer of 1884 moved the Farmers' mill from its location on Milwaukee street to its present site on Rock river at the foot of Dodge street, and leased it to the firm of Doty and McKee; later he bought out McKee and remained as partner in milling business with E. P. Doty until 1900, when he sold his interest in the milling business to Mr. Doty. In the same year, 1884, he erected the Phoebe block on Milwaukee street. In 1885, he built the first permanent electric lighting plant in the city of Janesville, Wisconsin, a part of the site formerly occupied by the Farmers' mill, using the same water wheels and flume for generating electric current that had been used for turning the Buhr mill.

In 1892, Mr. Norcross purchased the Fulton mill property on the Catfish river, tore down the old mill and put in its place an electric light plant, from which he furnished current for Edgerton and for Janesville street lamps. The Janesville circuit was about thirty-three miles in length and was a part of the first long distance plant in Wisconsin. In 1891 and 1893, he purchased both of the old and abandoned flouring mills at Indian Ford, and a few years thereafter united the power of both mills into an electric light plant and grist mill on the site of the McClesney mill on the west side of the river. In 1899 he sold the Janesville electric plant and together with the Fulton electric plant, to the Janesville Electric company. From 1889 to 1897, he was in partnership with Alexander Richardson, in the manufacture of ladies' fine shoes, in the Norcross block.

Mrs. Phoebe Poole Norcross passed to the world beyond in 1900, and later Mr. Norcross married for a second time Mrs. Frances Spaulding Redding, of Troy, Pennsylvania, who, with his three sons, Edward, John V. and Frederick, and Mrs. Bessie Mason, all of Chicago, and several grandchildren are left to mourn his loss.

Captain Norcross was a past department commander of the Wisconsin Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, being elected to that office in June of 1904. He also served as a member of the State Board of University Regents, resigning from that office several years ago when he purchased a winter home at Orlando, Florida and spent part of the year there.

Captain Norcross did not actually sever his connection with Janesville until a few years ago, but has made visits here twice a year, spending his winters in Chicago or at Troy, Pennsylvania, where Mrs. Norcross lived before her marriage. His visit here at this time was in connection with some business interests he still controls. He was invited to go to Madison today the guest of the assembly, of which he was so long an honored member, and it was feared for him to deliver the invitation that brought about the discovery he was mysteriously absent.

Upon finding the body this morning word was immediately sent to Speaker Whitteit of the Wisconsin assembly, and Republican Floor Leader Edward Everett, who has served the legislature with the deceased, immediately prepared a resolution of sympathy which was presented and passed under suspension of rules.

This hasn't anything to do with the war. San Francisco is not marshaling the coast artillery to repel an invading force—not a hostile invading force at any rate. It is something quite different. It is the illumination chief of the Panama Pacific International Exposition issuing orders to his aides de camp preparatory to releasing on a brief parole the Aurora Borealis.

The Aurora is in captivity at the exposition and for a few minutes each night the resplendent hues that flame in the gloom of the Arctic night will flame as gloriously under temperate skies.

It's merely a little trifle of science. Of course, the original Aurora Borealis wouldn't have achieved such a place in history, fact and fiction had it not been for the thing science knows as the spectrum. Any first grade high school boy with his elementary physics could tell you that. They brought everything to this world's exposition from all the 180 degrees of latitude and the 360 degrees that cross and circle the globe. There was only one thing left—the Aurora Borealis. Some bright mind—President Moore, Director of Works Connick, Chief of Color Jules Guerin, or possibly the publicity director, George Honz Perry—happened to think of the perennial wonder of the frozen lands north of fifty-three.

So they sent for the Chief of Illumination, W. D. A. Ryan. Ryan had already produced marvels in lighting. It was put up to him to take that same little spectrum and rifle it of the secret of the Aurora Borealis. It was one of those simple little commissions which the exposition directors have had such a habit of lightly distributing.

But—well have they selected their men—it was a commission executed with the same expedition and success that the commission was executed, for instance, to build the largest frame structure under one roof in the world today; that the commission was executed to paint on exterior walls mural canvases by famous artists, when such a thing had never been done before; that the commission was executed to create here a new and distinctively western school of architecture; that the commission was executed to paint an exposition in color for the first time in history; that the commission was executed to produce a landscape effect that gives the seeming of gardens rooted for a generation.

However he did it—this little trifle of science—Ryan executed his commission. The Aurora Borealis is here. Located on the yacht harbor of the exposition is a miniature Morro castle—combining, oddly enough, the tropics with the temperate zone in this arctic circle feature—and in this castle is a scintillator of 3,000,000,000 candle power. From this the Aurora Borealis bursts in effulgence and glory, mile on mile in spread, from the Golden Gate to timbered Tamalpais and down the stretches of the bay to touch with friendly greeting the rocky old whalers tied up for the season in the placid anchorages of the estuary.

It takes scores of giant projectors with many colored lenses besides this stupendous scintillator to complete the effect, and a company of men to man them. They work by batteries. The system of operation is as methodical and as intricate as the manning of a coast defense battery. Hence the codified directions of Mr. Ryan to his staff. Only, rather than repelling invaders, the sum and total of this entire grand effect of illumination is to invite and hold visitors. The extracts given from the "manual of operation" are but three out of thirty-three. No display lasts longer than five minutes and many of the lighting effects whirl one after the other at minute intervals.

The Aurora Borealis is by no means the only spectacular effect. There is the grand illumination of the exposition, including Alcatraz Island and the hills of Marin, across the bay. There is the Beam dance, Cloud salvo, Devil's Fan, Chromatic Wheels, Fairy Feathers and the Sunburst. Sunset clouds burst forth in the night and grotesque figures move across the heavens marked by the rays of searchlights. Steam serpents spit and hiss as they gyrate. Mines explode into great banks of smoke giving forth radiations of every known shade and tint, and many that the average person does not know. There are in all 300 effects worked out by the Scintillator in addition to the Aurora Borealis.

But Mr. Ryan would not thank anyone to center him entirely in his Aurora Borealis, which is classed rather as an attraction feature. It is in the utility phase of the science of illumination—or the art, for Mr. Ryan has made of his illumination an art—that the effects of most profound revelation in lighting are secured. And yet, without the color scheme of Mr. Jules Guerin—not Monsieur, as Guerin complains, for he is exceedingly democratic and everyday American—these lighting effects, colorful though they are, would fail of their richness. The man who deals with carbons, filaments, ampères and voltages is not generally held to carry in his system the temperament of the man who deals in colors and canvases. But Mr. Ryan is a temperamental mechanic. There is a great deal of the poet in him. He has occasional glimpses into the fourth dimension, just as the artist and the sculptor and the master writer have. That is why Guerin and Ryan have worked out so esthetically the scheme of this exposition, by which color and light are co-ordinated as nature intended they should be. Initially, the color scheme of the exposition was designed to merge this vast artificial creation with the setting of nature in which it has been placed. Glints of greens blend with lawn and landscape; browns and russets with hill and sandy beaches; ultramarines with the changing hues of the bay before; reds with the sunset tints that aureate the Golden Gate and cerulean blue that reflects the tones of the skies above.

It is a poetical conception: a dreamy, radiant glowing that envelops the practical detail of ground and dimension, with the glorious investiture of some new creation of enchantment by the fabled god of light.

To handle superlatives with conviction is the particular ability of a Carlyle or a circus press agent. Between these two extremes of intellectual effort the average writer makes a sorry mess. When the bald statement is made that the exposition lighting is an achievement in the superlative everything has been said. It is a step ahead of anything that has been attempted. On the entire area of the exposition—except alone in the Zone, where a carnival atmosphere is sought—there is not an arc light or an incandescent to fret the eye. Flood and indirect lighting have been developed to an extent where the facades, colonnades, towers and domes of the mighty palaces glow under the subdued rays of concealed lights as they do by day.

There are eight colors used in the exposition scheme and it is on these rich tones and tints that the lights play with enchanting effect. Travertine, a buff or old ivory in successful imitation of Italian Travertine stone, is the foundation color of the exposition. Against this is used French green, in lattices, flower tubs, curbing of grass plats, etc., oxidized copper, a peculiar mottled green used on ten of the domes to give the effect of age and afford a pleasing though subdued contrast with the sky; blue green; pinkish red green, used on the flagpoles; wall red, in three tones; found in the backgrounds of colonnades, niches, arches, sculpture; yellow-golden orange, largely used in enriching the Travertine and in deepening shadow effects; cerulean and Oriental blue, verging upon green and used in ceilings and vaulted recesses, coffer, and in the background of ornamental, gray and verde antique.

To these colors all artists employed at the exposition were restricted. In harmony with these colors are the lighting effects. Throwing forth in mellow, incarnadined relief a lofty platform of columns here, or emphasizing the cloistered depths of a recessed colonnade there, the beams and rays bathe the undulating opalescent expanse in a shifting, shimmering kaleidoscope. Centered on the two dominating sculptured groups—the Nations of the East and the Nations of the West—are searchlights which lift these Homeric groups apart from their architectural environment and from a distance the illusion is complete of the theme on which the exposition is founded: the meetings of the nations of the world. The mighty elephant with brilliant howdah that centers the one group seems marching, with attendant Arabs, Shieks and Mohammedans, across the Court of the Universe, to meet the advancing prairie schooner and cowboys, Indians and pioneers which are grouped around the great wagon of the companion group. It is precisely as though one saw, silhouetted in evening russets against the horizon, the living cavalcades.

Elsewhere spraying and playing fountains are centered in radiance; individual bits of sculpture picked out by a vagrant ray in the foliage; fluttering standards and gonfalons in the colors of red, orange and blue; while high in the heavens, as fireworks release them, the flags of all the nations float downward with the breeze, followed in their course by detective searchlights.

From the Aurora to the last tiny beam of cardinal that seeks out a sequestered nook and illumines some appropriate sculptured figure from the Arabian nights the illusion of forgotten dreams of childhood's embowered, empurpled visualization of fairyland and fable, is complete. It is something that long will linger, this vision by night that bursts in glory under the release keys of Mr. Ryan's magic switchboard.

Uncle Sam Plans A Surprise for the Naval World In the Construction of the First and Only Electric Battleship - The New U. S. S. California To Be Propelled and Operated Solely By Electricity.

By Waldon Fawcett.

IN these piping times of war when all the other leading naval powers on the planet are feverishly trying at each other's throats your watchfully waiting Uncle Sam is quietly planning a sizeable surprise for maritime circles. Thanks to Uncle Sam, the day is coming when the captain of a battleship will personally put his vessel through all her paces and maneuvers by simply pressing buttons as he stands on the bridge of the ship. From "Full speed ahead" to "Full speed astern" will, in emergency, become an accomplished fact, literally quicker than you could say "Jack Robinson." Nor need such sudden changes of mind and of objective be accomplished by racking and straining a throbbing ship as her great engines are suddenly reversed.

California is the name to be bestowed upon our first electric battleship and appropriately enough, since the Golden Gate State is a commonwealth which is notable for standing up to date-factness in all things. In order that it may be made readily and conclusively apparent whether the new current is a success as the sole source of battleship energy and, if so, that its advantages may be measured, Uncle Sam has planned to construct simultaneously with the California two other battleships, similar in all respects save in electrical dependence. In other words, the government is scheming to put the "deadly parallel" on the performances of the new-fangled sea warrior as compared with those of her sister ships that are fitted with the familiar regulation engines and machinery.

Biggest Of American Battleships.
The California will be the largest type of battleship yet designed for the United States Navy. She is not merely a "dreadnaught," as the modern "all big gun" ship is termed, but a "superdreadnaught" which goes the dreadnaught one better in size, gun power, and everything else. The California will measure 624 feet in length over all and nearly 97½ feet in breadth which means that she is coming precious near to the maximum breadth of beam that can be comfortably accommodated in the locks of the new Panama Canal. The California will be so markedly superior to any of our battleships now in commission that she will completely overshadow them but she will also lay it over the other battleships authorized by Congress within the past few years and which are now building. For instance, the California will be 16 feet longer than those monsters the Pennsylvania and Arizona which were ordered only a short time ago and she will exceed in length by full 41 feet the Nevada and the Oklahoma which were launched during the year 1914 and will be ready to go into commission a year or so hence.

Displacement 32,000 Tons.
As for displacement, the term in which battleships are usually measured by naval and maritime men, the California can boast 32,000 tons whereas her main battery of twelve of the huge 14-inch guns ought to make her more than a match for any fighting ship flying the flag of any nation.

For one thing the conflict in Europe has disclosed that the torpedo must henceforth be accounted a very important factor in naval warfare and consequently we find that arrangements have been made to fit the California with four submerged torpedo tubes so that this heavyweight fighter can discharge torpedoes at an enemy just as can a submarine. On the other hand the California will have an innovation in the form of a "torpedo defense battery" consisting of twenty-two 5-inch rapid-fire guns so that this new mistress of the waves will be well qualified to cope at close range with those hostile wasps of warfare that strive to creep close enough to a battleship to make sure that torpedoes will find their mark.

Most important of all the new-found attributes of the California is the possession of speed. Time and again during the present war it has been attested that speed in a heavy fighter is no less than in a light cruiser is a valuable asset and consequently every effort is being made to give the California this advantage. It was contemplated that the battleship should, under the circumstances, show a speed of not less than twenty-four miles per hour but now that it has been determined to install electrical equipment throughout, the enthusiasts on the subject of electrical propulsion are joyously proclaiming that the California will do much better than 24 miles.

Electric Collier Pointed The Way.
Just how it came to pass that the California is to be "the electric battleship" instead of a plain every-day sort of battleship, though the largest of her kind, is rather a long story. Strictly speaking, however, it was an electric collier or coal-carrying vessel that pointed the way to the present over-turning of precedent. For several years past electrical engineers of progressive ideas have been dreaming and talking of the day when our great ships, particularly our naval vessels, should answer as quickly and silently to electrical impulses as does an electric automobile or a trolley car. The logic of these champions of electricity was unanswerable and electricity gave a good account of itself in many small experimental vessels but the United States Government, along with the other great powers of the world, hesitated to risk an investment of millions of dollars—which is what an electric battleship amounts to.

However, in due course, the American electrical experts who had gone farther than any person else in quest of this goal, made out so favorable a case that the U. S. Navy Department decided to make a test on a vessel of moderate size. The collier Jupiter was chosen for the experiment and in order to accurately sense the value of the innovation it was determined—just as it has now been decided in the case of the California—to construct duplicate vessels that would afford standards of efficiency and economy whereby the freak might be measured.

A Complete Success.
Well, to make a long story short, the use of electricity on this test ship has proven a complete and unqualified success. The Jupiter has laid it all over her sister ships, the Cyclops, and the Neptune, fitted with turbine drive connected to propellers by gearing. Under ordinary service conditions the Jupiter maintains a speed of 15 knots per hour more easily and more cheaply than either of the others can make 14 knots and the experts from the Navy Department who voyaged on the electric collier during exhaustive tests under all sorts of conditions are ready to declare that her machinery equipment is superior in efficiency, lightness and economy to anything which has previously been used in such a ship.

How Power Is Applied.
Scarcely less remarkable than the fact of the employment of electrical energy in the California is the manner in which this power will be utilized to drive the ship through the water. This brings us to one of the foremost reasons why electricity is so valuable a means of warship propulsion—more valuable, indeed, in naval environment than it is in the merchant marine. The ordinary conditions of peace prescribe that our battleships shall do a considerable amount of cruising but from considerations of economy and other reasons it is desirable that they do this at low or moderate speed. But when trouble brews they may be called upon, literally at a moment's notice to work up to top speed. It is in just this sort of versatility that electrical propelling machinery is declared to find its forte.

How this will work out in the case of the California is most interesting. The battleship will be fitted with four screws or propellers—something familiar in the case of our ocean greyhounds but comparatively new practice in the case of battleships. There will be two separate and complete electrical installations, each furnishing power for two screws when the vessel is racing through the water at top speed. But the beauty of the arrangement is that it will always be possible, if circumstances dictate, to operate all four screws by means of one generator. The advantage of such arrangement in the event of an accident to one generator is obvious but none the less important is the fact that by shutting down one or more generators it will be possible to operate the battleship at her every-day gait and all cruising will be done by this plan with the result that there will be significant economies in operation.

Not only is the electrical installation expected to save money in coal bills, etc., but the weight of this machinery is less than that of any other, that could be used, thereby permitting just that much more weight allowance for guns and ammunition. Also the space occupied is considerably less than would be required for either turbines or reciprocating engines so that the California is going to have even more surplus space as compared with other battleships than would be indicated by her extra length. In naval maneuvers and battle practice it is expected that the California will be a joy to handle because of the accuracy with which her speed can be regulated.

How This Vast Body of Russian Peasantry Are Made Into Soldiers - Perfect Obedience To Officers - How They Manage To Exist On Their Small Salaries.

RUSSIA until recently has been regarded as just emerging from a state of semi-barbarism, as for centuries she has stood for every principle of government at variance with Anglo-Saxon liberty and individual freedom. Her defeat by Japan, though unexpected, was not altogether regretted, but that defeat was a blessing in disguise. It showed Russia the weakness in her military organization, and above all the necessity for a feeling of patriotism and loyalty among her people. It taught her what she was beginning to learn by slow stages—the advantages of a commerce, and her industrial development during the last ten years has been the marvel of the age.

The Land of the Bear was not wholly unprepared for war, and when the declaration came she had nearly a billion dollars as a gold reserve laid up in her treasury. Besides this, she is self-supporting, for her vast fields of wheat, corn, rye, oats and buckwheat could feed all of Europe if necessary.

Not only is Russia able to feed herself even in time of war, but she is rich in men for the army as well. More than one million men become available for military service each year. Of these only about four hundred and fifty thousand are accepted, and owing to the expense of keeping such an enormous army only the most robust men are taken. Horses can be obtained from Siberia by the thousands—sturdy little animals accustomed to the bitterest weather, consequently Russia has experienced little difficulty in securing recruits.

Recruited From Peasants.
The army is recruited for the most part from the one hundred and twenty million peasants. These men are the physical specimens, but uneducated. They are superstitious to an alarming extent and are for the most part fatalists. "God gave and God took" is their belief, and they set little value on their own lives or that of others. Brought up in the squalid surroundings of Russian peasant life they seem immune from illness. Lack of sanitation does not seem to affect them, and they are not bothered with nerves. Music will rouse them quicker to action than gun fire, and the sound of the Russian national anthem stimulates them to action with renewed "Good health, high born!" or words to that effect. The men repay their officers for this kindness with a dog-like devotion and will carry out orders to the letter, even though they know that death will be their fate by so doing. "For God and the Czar" on the lips of a Russian soldier will dare any danger if the order comes from his commander. Sometimes they are permitted to call their officers "Little Father," and this permission is a never-ending delight, especially to the man who comes from the part of the land known as "Little Russia."

Exemption From Service.
The entire male population between the ages of twenty-one and forty-four are eligible for service either with the regulars or in the militia. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, and numbers of men escape military service through these. The only son of a father over sixty years of age is supposed to serve his country by looking after the family at home. The only son of a widowed mother and the only one of several brothers who is able to work or who is the only worker of a family of orphans or the only grandson living with grandparents who have no son to support them, are exempt.

The Russian army is made up of many races—Tatars, Finns, Lithuanians, Tchoukash, Little Russians, Circassians, Poles, Eshts and Cossacks, as well as the pure Russians. While they are different in temperament and mode of living to a certain extent they all love force and they love the bayonet charge, and prefer its use in battle to that of a rifle.

Both the Finns and the Tatars make excellent soldiers, but the latter are spiteful fellows and when roused are callous to human suffering. Give the Tatar vodka and his fury knows no limit.

The Cossack, too, sometimes allows his hatred for another race to get the best of him. These men form a special part of the army and are great favorites with the Czar on account of their loyalty and faithfulness under all circumstances. They are the most remarkable horsemen in the world, for they can ride hanging to the belly of the animal as well as on his back. During one of their charges on the Germans they rode in this position and the Germans, thinking it merely a stampede of horses, threw down their rifles and attempted to catch the horses. The Cossacks suddenly came to life and killed nearly all the Germans before they were able to recover their guns.

The Siberian troops, too, are a splendid set of soldiers and will undoubtedly show their merits during the winter campaign, as they are almost immune to cold. The pure Russian is kinder in his manner than any of the others, but none the less a fighter.

A Detachment of Cossacks Ready to Start for the Front who has passed through a university serves two years in line and sixteen in the reserves. If he goes through a secondary school he serves three years and fifteen as a reserve, but if he comes from the national (public) school he must serve from five to seven years. The Cossacks are liable to service for life in return for the use of some of the Crown Lands in Russia and Siberia.

At least sixty-five per cent of the Russian conscripts can neither read nor write. The officers frequently have to teach them their alphabet, and many other things, for they are little short of barbarians when they enter the service.

Very few of the privates marry as the government rather discourages marriage on such a small salary unless the soldier's father is willing to take the young woman into his household while the young man is serving. It is no uncommon thing for a father to practically force his son to marry some strong, healthy peasant girl in order to have her help to support the family while the husband is away.

Swear Fealty To Czar.
Each man swears fealty to the Czar when he becomes eligible for the army. This is done with no little ceremony before a priest of the Greek Church. The Russian soldier carries his religion with him to the battlefield and when in charge is to be made the chaplain leads the regiment bearing the Cross aloft as the men rush toward the enemy, not infrequently losing his life.

On Sundays and holidays the army goes to church either indoors or out. The outdoor service is picturesque, with the field altar, gorgeous vestments of the priest and kneeling soldiers rendering the beautiful chants used in the Greek service.

Clothes And Equipment.
The uniform of the soldier is both strong and warm—rough gray coats, waterproof top-boots and warm caps. All unnecessary ornaments are dispensed with. He carries (if he is an infantryman) what is called a "3 line" rifle—a modification of the Krag Jorgensen rifle of 1891. It is said to kill at a distance of two miles and can be sighted for three thousand feet. His bayonet is always "fixed." The artillery used at present is from the Schneider-Creuzot works in France, while their mountain guns, horse artillery, howitzers and heavy siege guns are of Russian manufacture. The cavalry are supplied with guns of various makes. More than seven million men are in the field today—some of them engaged with Germany, others with the Austrians, while still another body of men has invaded Turkey. The struggle bids fair to be a long one, and whatever the outcome may be Russia stands first in numbers of men—soldiers who it is believed will give a good account of themselves in endurance, tenacity and bravery.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH H. CAMERON

WHAT SHALL SHE DO.
"My daughter is very anxious to study to become an interior decorator," writes a letter friend. "I had planned for her to be a teacher as I always wanted to be. I shall have to make more or less sacrifice for her education in either case. Now my daughter is clever and I believe she could do one thing as well as another, if she would only put her mind to it. Don't you think I have a right to urge her to carry out my wishes?"
Frankly, my friend, I do not.

Not unless you have good reason to think she has no ability in the line she wants to follow.

You simply, that she has a good deal of general ability, and say that she can do one thing as well as another, if she puts her mind to it. That's a big mistake. She may be able to do either thing, but not equally well.

One Thing We Each Do Best.
We all have a certain amount of energy which we can turn in one direction or another. But it will not accomplish the same amount in one direction as in another. It will not overcome the barrier of a natural inclination and an inborn awkwardness as it will in the direction in which natural inclination and facility give it a clear channel.

The line of least resistance is the line of most accomplishment in the matter of talent.

Some Parents Who Chose Ill.
The history of genius is full of examples of parents who insisted on choosing their children's vocations against their natural bent.
Walter Scott was put into the law, and the years that might have given us half a dozen more of the wonderful novels produced only law briefs.
Galileo, the great mathematician, never studied mathematics at all until he was twenty, because his father had made up his mind to have him a doctor and didn't think he needed to know anything about the subject.
Aristotle lost five years studying law.

An Income of $200,000 Risked.
In our own days Madame Schumann-Berke had to contend with a father who objected violently to her using her voice. Think what the world would have lost if he had succeeded in repressing her into a purely domestic life. To say nothing of her own loss of world fame and an income of almost $200,000 a year.

These are some of those who eventually persisted in expressing themselves in their own way. How many succumbed and followed the paths into which they were pushed, how many mute and inglorious Miltons of one sort or another have been made in this way, we cannot know.

Of course, I do not mean that your daughter will necessarily set the bent that way and not merely a passing fancy, she will doubtless do more than that if you force her energy into an obstructed channel.

N. B.—Young folks with artistic longings, but no decided talent, are not to consider this an argument for them.

A BLUE TAFFETA AFTERNOON GOWN

In the meantime an unable to get the full amount of a debt together.

Nell looked irritated. "It isn't that, it's because you think I'll ship out our finances by being wasteful; because I do not consult you. You want to be consulting engineer and you may as well confess it."

"Well, there is something in that," Dick admitted, "but I take a great deal of pride in seeing you look well, and this absolutely the first purchase of yours I ever objected to."

"It's the very first purchase larger than a spoon of thread that I have made without your advice and consent," said Nell with some bitterness.

"If my memory serves me right, I believe there was a gale of words over the purchase of the baby carriage that you thought expensive. How is that?" asked Dick.

"The whole crux of the matter is, each of us should have a certain part of the money to spend and not feel that an account is to be rendered. If that arrangement had been made I would have had no right to object to your buying a baby carriage, and you may get a dress."

"Well," capitulated Dick, "you submit plans and specifications as to what you think you will need and we'll have another meeting of the committee on finance," and Dick smiled into her earnest face.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, July 13.—The statement of Sir Cosmo D'Aubrey, owner of Stonehenge, that he will consider the sale of the old Druidic monument apart from the surrounding estate, has revived the scheme for its purchase. As the oldest human monument in England, Stonehenge has always appealed to popular imagination. But owing to the drain on the public purse in war charities, it is questionable whether sufficient money could be raised now.

In 1805 the owner of the Stonehenge of that time refused $50,000 for the roadways leading to it, which he had obstructed. This offer was made by the Footpath's preservation society. The new law of 1913, which enables the authorities to prevent the destruction of historic monuments, makes the work of purchase much easier than before, if the money can be raised.

Household Hints

SALADS.
Picnic Salad—Lettuce leaves washed and chopped, put in a thin napkin and placed in a tin can with a close cover. This will keep them crisp for forty-eight hours. A fine grade of canned flaked crabs is now in use. The crabs are mixed with mayonnaise and placed on lettuce leaves, on top of which thin shreds of Mexican red pineapples are interlarded.

Dressed Lettuce—Wash and dry lettuce leaves and place in a bowl. Cut to represent tulips. Serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Cheese Salad—To one cup finely cut celery add half cup cheese cut in small cubes and half cup pecans. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise dressing.

Cream Cheese and Currant Jelly Salad—Arrange lettuce leaves on large round plate. On it pile lightly Dutch or cream cheese, forced through a potato ricer, leaving the lettuce to form a wreath around the edges. In the center put half a glass of currant jelly. Serve with French dressing.

Cordillac Cucumber Salad—Pare cucumber and remove a thick slice from each end. With a sharp, pointed knife make eight grooves, four distances lengthwise of cucumber; then cut in thin slices crosswise, keeping in original shape. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing.

Dressing—Into a pint glass jar put half cup salad oil, five tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon powdered mustard, one tablespoon finely chopped parsley, four red peppers, eight green peppers, one teaspoon salt. Let stand one hour; then shake until well blended. The red and green peppers are the small ones found in pepper sauce.

Fruit Salad—Cut marshmallows in thin strips (there should be one and three-quarter cups). Add two cups pineapple cut in small cubes, four plums which have been peeled and quartered, half cup nut meats, and a few grains of salt. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing.

Mix two tablespoons flour, one tablespoon each of salt, sugar and mustard, add two slightly beaten eggs, one and one-half cups scalded milk, and half cup vinegar, very slowly. Cook over hot water and mix with a wooden spoon, stirring constantly. Add four tablespoons butter, strain, and when mixture cools, add an equal quantity of whipped cream.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Absorbent Cotton for Dress Shields—During the summer, keeping up a supply of dress shields is quite a problem. An inexpensive and very satisfactory way of solving this problem is to buy a neckpiece of absorbent cotton and lightly stitch a thin layer in the armpits of each garment. This cotton will last for three or four years, and can be ripped out and renewed. This is white and dainty and absorbs perspiration readily and without color.

To Keep Flies Out of Sick Room—Put some oil of lavender in a saucer and pour hot water over it. Place it in bedroom and it will keep room clear of flies and such pests as warm weather brings us.

A Fine Varnish Remover—Two parts denatured alcohol, one part turpentine; this cost the work perfectly and is much cheaper than prepared varnish removers.

Chloride of Lime, as a bleaching agent, is not destructive to a fabric if it is quickly followed by a rinse water in which ammonia has been added. This counteracts the chloride of lime and the results are harmless.

If you have several lemons and do not use them right away, a very good way to keep them is by placing each lemon under a glass.

HOME-MADE DUSTER.
To make a "dustless dust cloth" place a cloth in a strong, hot sud of pure soap, to which add a few drops of turpentine; let set for two hours; then wring out. Cloths treated in this way will hold the dust and at the same time give a brilliant polish to furniture. Treat the cloths in this manner every two weeks.

BADGER JEWELERS HEAR ADVICE TO GUARD TRETT
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., July 13.—Police Chief Janssen today gave Wisconsin Jewelers a few pointers on prevention of theft. His advice was embodied in a speech before the Wisconsin Retail Jewelers' association, which opened its annual convention in the Hotel Wisconsin this morning. Other speakers were John L. Shephard of New York, who spoke of fixing, selling prices, and Charles H. Higginbotham of South Bend, Ind., who gave an address on the repair department. President William H. Upmeyer presided.

TODAY'S BEAUTY SUGGESTIONS.
Face powder simply covers up an unattractive complexion and leaves no lasting benefits. Those who have tried a simple spumax face lotion find it much better, as it removes skin discolorations, such as freckles and tan, and makes the skin smooth, white, and velvety. This lotion is made by dissolving four ounces of spumax in one-half pint hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This complexion beautifier does not rub off or show like powder, and gives a more refined appearance. It removes both shininess and sallowness, rapidly giving the skin a permanent healthy, youthful appearance.

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be had at trifling expense by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthar in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lotion that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a suppleness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthar shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Advertisement.

Heart and Home Problems

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) If a girl refuses to speak to a boy after he has been very kind to her, should she make an apology?

(2) Should a girl give a boy her picture?

(3) What should a girl do if a boy insists upon talking love?

(4) Is it polite for a girl to call a Ford a "Lizzie" when in the company of a young man?

(5) A friend of mine keeps telling me that he loves me and wishes I would marry him. Do you think he means it? He is only sixteen and I am fifteen.

THREE.
(1) She should give the reason why she did not.

(2) I do not think girls should give away their pictures promiscuously. In some cases, where they have known each other for years, it is all right for a girl to give a boy her picture, however.

(3) A boy will not insist upon making love if he knows the girl does not like it. After she shows him that she is not interested in what he says, his vanity is hurt, and he keeps still, at least for a time. If he starts the subject later she can again show him that she does not like what he has to say.

(4) The use of slang by a girl makes her less likable.

(5) When a boy of sixteen loves, his love is not at all likely to be lasting. You are both too young to treat seriously of love.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What tint of powder should a person with dark brown hair and eyes and a pale skin use?

(2) Would these colors be becoming?

ing to such a person: Black, white, yellow, brown, red, pink, rose color and that new sand color? And shouldn't she avoid shades of blue and green?

(3) Are rosy cheeks an absolute necessity to good health? Isn't a good white skin sometimes an indication of health?

(4) Will you please print a list of articles and how many of each to go in a hope box?

(1) Flesh tint.

(2) Black, brown and sand color are not becoming to most very dark people. Fair pink and pale blue are all right.

(3) Rosy cheeks are no more an indication of health than a clear, colorless skin. Some people with poor health have flushed cheeks.

(4) Table and bed linens, bath towels, hand and guest towels, dish towels and dish cloths, underwear, nightgowns and sometimes silverware are the articles usually put away in hope chests. There is no fixed number of each thing. A girl saves as much as it is convenient to get. Anything that would be of use in a girl's own home has its place in the hope box.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My brother wishes me to ask your advice concerning his love troubles. He is very much in love with a girl whom he thinks is perfect in every way except that she has enormous feet. When she dances with him she steps all over his feet, which embarrasses him very much. Do you think if he marries her he can get beyond the point where he notices her feet?

I would not advise anyone as particular as your brother to marry; he could not be happy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please tell me something that will keep my hair from getting so oily, as I do not like to wash it so much.

Hog Contest.

Why doesn't some ingenious little promoter stage a heavy weight hog championship contest between the man who won't move up on the street car and the auto driver who thinks pedestrians shouldn't cross the street?
